30,000 Troops Added to Italy's Power in Africa

Swift Moves by Il Duce Whip Up Public's Martial Spirit.

Munitions Plants On 24-Hour Day

10 More Submarines to Be Built and Air Force Enlarged.

By the United Press.

Rome, July 15.—Italian spirit reached militant heights today as Premier Benito Mussolini mobilized additional land, sea and air forces to enforce his demand for prompt war against Abyssinia or immediate award of an Italian protectorate over the "conquering Lion of Judah's" empire.

Il Duce brushed European diplomatic moves aside by:

1. Mobilizing two additional divisions of 30,000 Black Shirt troops for East African service. He now has 160,000 combat units en route or quartered on Abyssinian frontiers.
2. Calling specialists and motor drivers of the classes of 1909, 1910 and 1912 to the colors.
3. Issuing air ministry orders to additional fighting planes, pilots and specialists.
4. Ordering the navy ministry to lay down 10 submarines for launching in November.
5. Ordering munitions factories to work full time at top speed.

All Compromises Fail.

The 160,000 troops concentrated in East Africa, on transports or at Italian ports of embarkation were in addition to native forces already schooled for war in Eritrea and Italian Somaliland.

Today's events showed the temper of Italian aspirations in Africa is taking the form of forceful realization. All compromises have fallen short of giving Il Duce his Abyssinian protectorate without war.

Military preparations showed Il Duce will not be deterred from his purpose. His public was behind him solidly. Throughout the country thousands of youths were volunteering for East African service.

[An Associated Press dispatch from Rome commented on persistent reports Mussolini may make a personal inspection tour of East Africa. Official circles doubted the trip was likely in the near future, however.—Editor's note.]

"Colonize Abyssinia" already is a slogan shouted by the Italian people. Latest mobilizations brought the Abyssinian crisis into practically every Italian home in some form.

"Acceleration of military preparations by Abyssinia has made necessary further measures of a military character by Italy," Mussolini said in a communique. Il Duce, as minister of armed forces, ordered mobilization of the Sila division under command of Gen. Bertini. Simultaneously there has been formed another division called Sila II to replace the departing unit.

Mobilization also has been ordered of the Fifth Black Shirt Division which, overseas, will be called February 1 under Gen. Attilio Terruzzi.

The air ministry ordered additional pilots and specialists to arms. The navy ministry ordered immediate construction of 10 submarines which will be launched simultaneously in November—the first month of the fourteenth Fascist year.

Duce Toils Night and Day.

Gen. De Michelis will command the new division, Sila II. Gen. Terruzzi, commander of the Black Shirt Militia, volunteered for service in East Africa, agreeing to accept a minor division commander if sent. Specialists and motor drivers of the classes of 1909, 1910 and 1912 have been called to the colors.

Mussolini toils day and night at Venice Palace directing the accelerated operations of his vast war machine. His two sons have volunteered for East African service, indicating Il Duce expects the high and low in Italy to do their duty.

Observers believed the martial spirit throughout the country has gotten out of the hands of the government. Each report of Italo-

'The Abundant Life.'

SENATOR GLASS (Democrat), of Virginia, commenting on a proposed AAA amendment to impose birth control on bees, told the Senate he did not want to go to jail because he did not know how to control the activity of his queen bee.

A Wisconsin woman, reading of his remark, wrote: "In answer to your appeal I'll say: Cutting out all queen cells in your hives every ten days to two weeks during the season is a sure method of bee birth control." She added a postscript: "How about being our next President?"

"Permit me to thank you for indicating exactly how I may manage the birth control of my queen bees," Glass wrote in reply, "but to be entirely frank, I have no disposition to deprive my queen bees of the more abundant life that Prof. Tugwell has contrived for human beings."

ELLIOTT: At Fort Worth a political row over the husky son of the President neared a climax with both sides predicting victory in a new attempt to out him as executive vice president of Texas Young Democrats.

JAMES: At Port Washington, N. Y., he called upon an audience of members of the Port Washington Democratic Club to consider the achievements of the present Administration as "a Democratic ball game" and to continue it on the strength of its accomplishments.

JOHN: At Nashville, Tenn., the youngest son of the President laughed when he told how he had spent two weeks working for the forestry department of the Tennessee Valley Authority and traveled about Knoxville without being recognized.

FRANKLIN PARK.

The Word of God.

IT was stifling mid-afternoon, just before the storm broke, and on the seedy grass of the park at Fourteenth and K streets stood a gray-haired, rail-thin man garbed in black. On the grass nearby sat his black derby. In his hands fluttered some sheets of note paper, but he did not often refer to them.

"* * * And I ask you what is the root of evil? What is it? Do you know? Well, I'll tell you! I'll tell you what is the root of evil * * *."

His voice rang over the nearly deserted park as though he was addressing a vast congregation. On the bench directly before him sat a broken bum, half asleep, too inert to bother moving away. Under a tree to the speaker's right stood an aged, fat colored man, his hat respectfully in his hand. Another man, better dresed, had halted a moment on the cement walk to listen curiously.

This was his audience—three. But the speaker went on fiercely, gesturing frequently toward the sky, his voice running the scale from harsh command to pleading tremolo.

Presently the rain came. The curious passer-by hurried away. The bum moved off the bench to the shelter of a bigger tree.

As the drops thickened to a downpour, the speaker, drenched, continued to harangue the park, shouting louder against the rush of the rain. And the old, fat colored man continued to wait patiently, hat in hand, until the sermon should end.

Pope Scores Hitler Drive On Catholics

Open Break Between Vatican and Nazi Chief Materializes.

Failure of Reichsfuehrer to Keep Peace Truce Is Cited.

By the United Press.

Vatican City, July 15.—The precarious truce between the Vatican and Nazi Germany was shattered today when Pope Pius, through his official organ, Osservatore Romano, vigorously attacked Adolph Hitler's religious policies.

The Nazis have imprisoned many priests and nuns on charges of smuggling money out of Germany.

Germany's sterilization laws, Nazi attacks on the Catholic youth organization and restriction of religious liberties drew fire from the Holy See.

"For some time Catholics in Germany have been going through difficult hours in defense of Catholic dogma, morals and their inalienable rights," Osservatore Romano said.

"Painful Situation."

"A painful situation has been created.

"It can not be explained or reconciled with the published assurances of Herr Hitler when he took possession of the government. Then he said he wished to respect the Catholic Church and keep the peace stipulated by the concordat.

"One can think of serious molestation suffered by ecclesiastical authorities as being provoked by reckless extremists, but now Dr. Frick (Wilhelm F. Frick, minister of interior) has made statements on which discussion is unnecessary.

"Regarding the law of sterilization:

"According to Dr. Frick, the law of sterilization must be observed by every Catholic, even if it is against the teaching of the church and condemned by Divine law.

Hits Catholic Youth.

"Minister Frick then attacked the Catholic youth organization. The concordat provides that priests and religious teachers in nowise shall be restricted in explaining publicly the doctrine and maxims of the Catholic Church.

"The concordat guarantees full liberty of preaching and teaching for the church. It also guarantees freedom of the Catholic press."

Berlin, July 15 (U.P.).—Catholic communities in south Germany today criticized Nazi Storm Troops after a series of incidents in Muenster District, culminating in desecration of a church at Borken.

Nazis retorted that a Catholic burned an altar and left false clews to throw blame on storm troopers.

Viktor Lutze, Storm Troop chief of staff, sharply warned communities:

"Cease this confessional agitation against storm troopers.

"Investigation proved clearly the Borken desecration was done by an enemy. It was calculated to throw storm troopers into disrepute.

"Storm troopers are determined their escutcheon will not be besmirched in this fashion. Both culprits and their aids will be punished to the full limit of the law."

Silver Spring Man And Girl Missing

Montgomery County Police yesterday were searching for two persons, who disappeared at about the same time, one a Silver Spring barber and the other a 16-year-old Five and Ten Cent store salesgirl.

W. O. Colie, 6415 Brookville road, reported to Bethesda police that Claude Vigar, of Silver Spring, whom he had hired to run his barber shop for several days, had disappeared Saturday without reporting on the proceeds for four days and that a suit of clothes Colie had left at the shop also was missing.

Charles Elliot, of Silver Spring, asked police of that substation to search for his daughter, Vera Louise Elliot, who had left home Saturday to go to work in a store at Silver Spring, but had failed to report for work.

Police said the pair were acquainted.

Actress Found Dead in Rooms Of Cameraman

Bullet in Head Brought Death Twice Sought by Julia Graham.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, July 15.—The brief, sensational career of beautiful young Julia Graham, former Sisterville, W. Va., choir singer who crashed the movies by twice attempting suicide, was stilled tonight by death.

The unclad body of the tall, slender brunette was found by police early today, a bullet hole in the left temple, in the apartment of Benjamin F. Reynolds, film cameraman. Authorities said Reynolds is married and that his wife is visiting in the East.

Detective Lieutenant H. A. Spencer said Reynolds told him Miss Graham committed suicide with his pistol. He said he took her to his apartment because she was "too drunk" to go to the Studio Club, where she resided.

On March 2, 1934, Miss Graham, despondent because of her inability to break into pictures, swallowed poison. She wrote a note saying she was tired of living and hated life. On September 27, she tried to end her life by poison again.

Aided by Carroll.

Earl Carroll, New York stage producer who came here to make a movie, read of her despondency and arranged a screen test for her. She passed it, played small parts and appeared in "Murder at the Vanities."

Lieut. Spencer said Reynolds told him that he and Miss Graham went to Santa Catalina Island last Saturday and registered at a hotel under assumed names. They returned to Los Angeles last night.

"Miss Graham was drinking a good deal," Spencer quoted Reynolds as saying. "She seemed to be in good humor. She had $15 of her own money. When I told her I didn't want any more to drink, she went down to the bar to get some more for herself.

"At Wilmington we took a bus to drive to Santa Monica, where I had left my auto. On the way there Miss Graham began to worry about getting to her studio by 7:30 a. m. She was working in a picture. She said she was in no condition to go to her club and asked me if I could put her up at home.

"I told her that I couldn't, that my wife was away. She insisted, however. When we got there she laid down on a couch and went to sleep immediately."

Reynolds said he retired to his

Bank Robber Kills 2 Police; Hunt Mahan

Man Wanted as Weyerhaeuser Kidnaping Brains Suspected.

Holdup Was in Locality in Which He Previously Operated.

By the Associated Press.

Tacoma, July 15.—A bank bandit reported to resemble scar-faced William Mahan, fugitive "brains" of the George Weyerhaeuser kidnaping, shot and killed two police officers near here today and escaped with scores of officers in hot pursuit.

The robber was fleeing with $500 obtained in a holdup of the Orting State Bank, 18 miles southeast of here, when encountered by Frank Chadwick, chief of police of Puyallup, and Harry Storem. They were slain in the ensuing fight.

Police throughout western Washington were notified immediately. Highways and roads were guarded. A report from Everett said William Cole, chief of the Washington State Police, had taken a plane to Puyallup. Motorcycle policemen rushed to the area.

Holdup Methods Mahan's.

The killer, who, Pierce County sheriff's deputies said, answered the description of Mahan, was racing north toward Seattle when the shooting occurred. The deputies said the holdup methods tallied with those of Mahan in previous crimes.

Mahan is suspected in the robbery of the Eatonville Bank two years ago. Eatonville is about 40 miles from Puyallup. The 32-year-old former convict last was seen at Butte, Mont., June 1 when he fled an automobile containing more than $15,000 of the $200,000 Weyerhaeuser ransom money.

Leslie Stone, cashier of the bank said the bandit resembled Mahan in some ways, being about the same size and age.

"Howeve:, I did not see a scar on his face," Stone said. "He might have been or he might not."

Justice Agents Mum.

No immediate comment was forthcoming from Department of Justice men participating in the Mahan hunt throughout the West. At Washington, the department said no word of the killings had been received.

The bandit, working alone, held up the bank shortly before noon and escaped after sticking a gun in the face of the teller.

A telephone call to Puyallup sent Chief Chadwick and Storem out on the highway to intercept the holdup man, who was driving a sedan.

When the officers attempted to stop the car in front of the C. W. Orton ranch, just outside Sumner, the bandit opened fire, killing Chadwick instantly and severely wounding Storem. Storem died in a hospital. The car then sped in the direction of Puyallup and Seattle.

Cold-Blooded Slaying.

A check showed the plates had been issued to Harley H. Fluke of Seattle, who had reported three months ago his licenses were stolen in Tacoma.

The bandit was described as about 27 years old, and wearing a blue denim shirt, open at the throat.

The Puyallup officers flushed the bandit car a short distance from Orting and turned around and gave chase. They caught up with the car and forced it to the side. The bandit brought his car to a stop, got out and walked to the police car.

Chadwick opened the door of his car to step out, when the man opened fire, killing Chadwick instantly. He fell dead against the door of the car and the second shot from the bandit's revolver wounded Storem and he fell unconscious.

Neither officer had a chance to fire a shot.

John Joy Edson Is Dead at 89; Dean of Capital's Financiers

Well-Known Banker Was Ill 2 Weeks; Apostle of Hard Work.

John Joy Edson, dean of Washington's financiers and one of its most beloved citizens, died late yesterday at his home, 1324 Sixteenth street northwest. He was 89 years old.

Death came at 6:30 p. m., after an illness of two weeks.

Word of his passing spread swiftly through the Capital and inquiries and tributes poured into newspaper offices.

On his eighty-ninth birthday, May 18, last, Mr. Edson was at his desk expounding his philosophy that the country would weather the economic depression if it would stick to hard work and American fundamentals.

Mr. Edson's life exemplified that philosophy. He learned how to work hard on the Jefferson, Ohio, farm on which he was born. His first earning was $3, which he received at a rate of 25 cents a day for harvesting hay on a neighbor's farm.

His farm career was cut short by the outbreak of the Civil War. Although only 15 he enlisted and served from 1861 to 1863 with the Sixty-first New York Volunteers. After the war, he came to Washington to accept a clerk's appointment in the United States Treasury.

Meanwhile he attended the Columbian (now George Washington) University Law School, and was admitted to the District bar in 1869. He practiced patent law for several years thereafter and in 1879 organized the Equitable Co-operative Building Association. He had remained president of the association since 1898.

He was elected president of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., in 1894 and continued to serve in that

Phillips Laughs At Loss Claims On Soviet Deal

Manganese Industry Fears Ridiculed; Trade Pact Fight Threatened.

In an attack inspired by the small and almost insignificant manganese ore industry in this country, the reciprocal trade agreements act, as a result of the Soviet-American agreement made on Saturday, yesterday was threatened with a suit to test its constitutionality and with efforts to have it repealed.

Meanwhile, Acting Secretary of State William Phillips defended the Soviet-American exchange of notes, which provided for extending to Russian goods any tariff concessions given by this Government to other countries signing reciprocal trade pacts on the promise of the Soviets to purchase goods with a value of $30,000,000 in the United States in the next 12 months.

Phillips denied this Government would cease its efforts for a settlement of American claims, totaling $500,000,000 or more, against the Soviets. He said some aspects of the Soviet-American agreement apparently had not been clearly understood and he went on to reiterate in general what had been reported in The Post Sunday morning.

The chief benefit which the Russians will obtain from Saturday's agreement would be the 50 per cent reduction in the duty on manganese, which now is equivalent to approximately 110 per cent ad valorem. Such a reduction has been made in a trade agreement with Brazil, but this pact has not yet been ratified by the Brazilians and is not effective.

PWA Housing Invalid, Says Appeal Court

U. S. Is Without Power to Condemn Slum Land, Decision Holds.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Despite the sharp blow dealt the New Deal by the Federal Court of Appeals for the sixth circuit at Cincinnati yesterday when it held land could not be condemned by the Federal Government for low-cost housing projects, Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes was undaunted.

Possessing $249,000,000 of works relief money for housing projects, Ickes declared that while the Cincinnati decision "will restrict the slum clearance and low-rent housing program somewhat, it will not shut it off." The groundwork, he added, had been laid for proceeding without resort to condemnation suits.

He pointed out that the PWA could proceed with housing projects either by direct purchase of the needed land by negotiation without condemnation proceedings or through cooperation with municipal or State authorities, whereby the latter would institute the condemnation proceedings.

The Cincinnati appellate court in a 2-to-1 opinion upheld the decision of former Federal Judge Charles I. Dawson at Louisville, Ky., that the Federal Government's power of eminent domain did not extend to such non-governmental functions as the erection of huoses or the demolition of slums.

"The taking of any citizen's property for the purpose of improving it and selling it or leasing it to another, or for the purpose of reducing unemployment, is not, in our

Deen, Leader in Move, Acts Today in House for Close in Week.

Leaders Fearful Of Poll Result

Stampede in Congress Threatens, Despite Bills Piled Up.

By Robert C. Albright.

Taut nerves and frayed tempers in Congress yesterday threatened a bolt for adjournment of both houses before the President's "share the wealth" tax program can be enacted into law.

A Democrat—Representative Braswell Deen, of Georgia—touched off the spark that may send the House into a stampede for adjournment within the week, unless checked by direct White House representations.

Deen will introduce two resolutions in the House today, one calling for adjournment of Congress July 23, a week from today, and the other giving the President a routine adjournment authority to sign bills.

Petition Planned.

The resolutions will go to the Rules Committee. Tomorrow a petition will be circulated to discharge the committee and force a House vote, Deen said. Sentiment for packing up luggage and deserting the Capitol is so strong among members that leaders fear the motion may carry if it ever reaches a vote.

The Georgian's plans were revealed after a speech he made in the House yesterday, striking the keynote of the movement. Deen was greeted with uproarious applause when he said:

"I appeal to the membership of the House, as a matter of justice to our colleagues who are now ill and those of us who are not physically able to stay here from day to day, that we also impress upon the President the importance of bringing this Congress to immediate close."

At least two other similar appeals have been made by Democrats on both sides of the Capitol in the past week and the movement yesterday assumed proportions that presented a real problem requiring the most delicate handling by the leadership and the President himself.

No White House Word.

Both Houses had expected some word on adjournment would result from Mr. Roosevelt's week-end outing with Congressional leaders. This failed to develop. The subject was discussed only casually at Jefferson Island and no decision was reached.

Yesterday a strained situation was aggravated by word that the President wanted not only the hitherto listed "must" bills enacted this session, but the Copeland food and drug bill as well. This has passed only the Senate. A new House Interstate Commerce subcommittee was named to work out a bill.

Federal alcohol control legislation, the Guffey coal bill, the President's gold legislation, and last, but most exasperating in its potentialities for an indefinite session, the President's wealth-sharing tax program, already looming ominously in the path of an early adjournment "sine die."

Spontaneous demands for a fixed quitting date are said to have originated not in Congress, weary and unhappy as most members are at the prospects of an indefinite session. Letters from "back home" are pouring into the offices of members, and with them plaints of uncertainty by business men, who insist they can not plan ahead as long as legislative prospects continue unsettled.

Byrns Would Compromise.

Speaker Byrns, friends say, dislikes to employ "big stick" tactics. He has tactfully suggested a series of three-day House recesses once the House has caught up with its calendar, but whether this will suffice to meet the adjournment demand is a matter for speculation. Byrns thinks there is little chance for adjournment before August 20. Until last week, pressure for

Actors Stampede for Jobs, Score Hurt in Theater Crash

By the United Press.

Cleveland, July 15.—The collapse of the bannister of a marble staircase during the rehearsal of the play "The Last Days of Pompeii," at the public auditorium tonight sent scores of men crashing to the concrete floor, injuring 13 seriously. More than a score suffered minor injuries.

Ray Anderson, one of the directors of the pageant which is to be displayed in connection with the summer festival late this month, was one of those seriously injured. He suffered a possible skull fracture and internal injuries.

Anderson had advertised for 200 men to act as extras in the pageant and approximately 2,000 applicants appeared. Anderson stood at the head of a mable staircase in the west lobby of the Auditorium and shouted to the applicants to file past him.

In the rush that followed Anderson was pushed against the bannister, which crumbled beneath the weight of hundreds of applicants and Anderson and his assistant, Thomas Payne, fell 12 feet, landing in the midst of the applicants on the landing below.

Police cleared the hall and ambulances took the injued to the hospital.

Prison Goods Banned.

The House yesterday passed and sent to the White House a bill to make it a Federal offense, punishable by a $1,000 fine, to send prison-made goods into States having laws forbidding such trade.

Capital Watches Moon Eclipse For Lunar Thrill of Century

Spectacle Starting at 9:15 P. M. Reaches Totality at 11:09 and Concludes Last Phase at 2:48 A. M.—Longest in 50 Years.

Washington, along with the remainder of the Nation, turned its gaze toward the heavens last night to see the first total eclipse of the moon since 1927.

When the moon went into hiding clouds hid the beginning of the display in this city, but Naval Observatory watchers said they quickly disappeared. By 11:09, the total eclipse stage, they began to move away.

The eclipse, scientists said, was the longest in a half century, the first and last stages extending from 9:15 p. m. to 2:48 a. m.

Astronomers in the Naval Observatory have aimed a 26-inch telescope at the moon, while they prepared to test their instruments and check up on previous calculations.

Scientists in charge of the Yerkes Observatory at Williams Bay, Wis., announced that they were observing the lunar eclipse more in the interest of history than of science.

Dr. G. Vanbiesbroeck, of the University of Chicago, who is in charge of the observatory, explained that historians have encountered difficulty in computing the time of certain ancient events, their only clews in some cases being references to eclipses. He continued:

"The moon's monthly motion around the earth has been determined mathematically with an accuracy that enables computers to predict the phases of an eclipse with great precision. This can be done not only for present day occurences, but for events many years in the future as well as for centuries in the past.

"In several instances astronomers and historians have co-operated in checking the dates of historical events by means of old records of solar or lunar eclipses. These give reliable references for ancient chronology when it is sometimes difficult to establish the sequence of events from the meager information available."

Giant Python and Lion Escape, Mangle 2 Men at Buck's Camp

By the Associated Press.

Amityville, N. Y., July 15.—Two men were seriously injured today at Frank Buck's wild animal camp, one by a huge python snake, the other by a lion that became frightened by the confusion that arose after the snake escaped.

Otis Lloyd was attacked by the python. The snake wrapped itself around him as he shouted for help. It took four other employes five minutes to pry the huge snake from him.

The lion became excited, broke loose from his cage and attacked Henry Kirby, clawing him. Kirby was severely lacerated on the shoulder and arm. Both men were removed to Reed Hospital.

"Lloyd shouted for help and told the four men where to grab the snake," said Fred Blue, who handles elephants at the camp.

"He didn't faint, although several times it looked like he would. Lloyd, you know, is an experienced snake man. He was the coolest thing I ever saw.

"It happened when we were changing the snake from its box to a cage. The animals always get excited when we do that. Four or five had hold of the python—a 27-foot snake—when he broke loose.

"He wrapped himself around Lloyd quick as a flash."

The python arrived in New York Saturday as part of a shipment from the jungles of Malay, Sumatra and India.

Trainers ran to the aid of the man attacked by the lion and succeeded in getting the animal back in his cage. The python also was subdued without further trouble.

Death Sentence Bloc Demands Hearing at Quiz

House Liberals, Wheeler to Tell Own Versions of Parleys on Utility Bill.

By the United Press.

A fighting corps of House Liberals yesterday demanded the right to tell their version of secret meetings held to win support for the "death sentence" in the Wheeler-Rayburn bill before the Rules Committee ends this phase of its inquiry into lobbying on utilities bills.

The investigation is to be resumed today with Representative Ralph O. Brewster (Republican), of Maine, on the stand. Brewster charged that Thomas Corcoran, RFC attorney, sought to influence his vote on the holding company measure. He will reply to statements made by other witnesses in connection with the incident and call members of his office staff to substantiate his story.

Chairman Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, late yesterday asked and received permission to appear before the House group today.

Wheeler's name was brought into the case last week when Corcoran testified that Wheeler had told him Brewster visited Wheeler's office and told him that he could influence the vote of Senator Wallace White (Republican), of Maine, on the "death sentence."

Lavish Entertaining Charged.

Chairman John O'Connor (Democrat), New York, had announced that Brewster's testimony would conclude the committee's investigation of alleged lobbying by Administration agents in favor of the "death sentence." He wants to turn to reports that the power interests maintained a costly lobby in a fashionable downtown hotel and entertained lavishly as part of the campaign to beat the bill.

But the Liberals want to be heard. Sprinkled throughout the testimony of Brewster, Corcoran and Dr. Ernest Gruening, director of the Bureau of Territories and Insular Possessions, has run the story of mysterious night sessions of Government officials and Congressmen seeking to jam the "death sentence" for "unnecessary" utilities holding companies through the House.

Brewster took part in many of these confereences, according to the testimony. The extent to which he participated and the suggestions he offered will be told by other participants who are demanding now to be heard. They include Representatives John Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi; Knute Hill (Democrat), Washington; W. D. McFarlane (Democrat), Texas; Maury Maverick (Democrat), Texas; Vito Marcantonio (Republican), New York; George J. Schneider (Progressive), Wisconsin; Edward C. Moran (Democrat), Maine; Harry Sauthoff (Progressive), Wisconsin; Marion A. Zioncheck (Democrat), Washington.

8 Signers Needed To Aid Lemke Bill

Author Confident of Farm Mortgage Plan Success.

By the Associated Press.

Backers of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bill picked up a couple of signers yesterday on their petition to force a House vote—but still were 8 short of the necessary 216.

"We're going over all right," announced Representative Lemke (Republican), North Dakota, co-author of the Administration-opposed legislation to provide $3,000,000,000 in new money to refinance farm mortgages.

Lemke spoke after Representative McGroarty (Democrat), California, had urged on the floor that members sign on the dotted line, so they could tell their constituents they were not "gagged" on legislation.

House Democratic leaders have been working to get names scratched off the petition, which at one time was within fewer than half a dozen of the necessary total.

Between You and Me

Powers of Sovereign Much Debated; Way to Adjournment Hinted.

By Raymond Clapper

FROM now on a good deal of talk will be heard about the powers inherent in the sovereign. It sounds forbidding, something like the divine right of kings out of which indeed, the idea grew.

But it has become entangled with some of the Roosevelt policies, with an attempt to prevent citizens from going into court to demand gold for their Government bonds, and with an attempt by the Government to build a group of low-cost houses in Louisville, Ky. It probably will involve other activities as the courts get around to scrutinizing them.

So, like it or not, here it is. And a right warm argument it can start, too.

Louis XIV said he was the state. Other monarchs polished up the same idea as the "divine right of kings." From this grew the doctrine that the king could do no wrong. When the people displaced kings they tended to adopt the theory that they, the new sovereign, also could do no wrong.

So, while the framers of the American Constitution had nothing to say on the subject, the Supreme Court claimed for this Government certain attributes of sovereignty, subject to limitations imposed by the Constitution. That is how the court was able, without any specific instructions in the Constitution, to declare that the Federal Government, as sovereign, could not be sued by an outraged citizen. The Federal Government, in its majesty, could graciously be pleased to have a citizen bring a lawsuit against it, but only by permission. That is one thing which the Supreme Court has done that Senator Borah does not like. He believes it smacks too much of the old divine right of kings.

Nevertheless, Attorney General Cummings is basing his plea for a law to forbid gold clause suits on that implied power of sovereignty. Congress could, according to this theory, wipe out the value of the dollar, repudiate its bonds, or do anything else and the citizen would have no redress. In fact, the gold clause bill, if it becomes a law, would protect the Government against any court case involving the currency.

This act would, in view of the past decisions by the Supreme Court which flatly affirm the Government's immunity to suit without its consent, put up to the nine justices a difficult question. In the recent gold cases, the court held that the Government had broken its word but that the citizen could not do anything about it unless he could show damages. It happened that years ago Congress set up the Court of Claims so that citizens could sue the Government in damage cases. That was to take the burden of considering these claims off of Congress. It is to prevent citizens utilizing this privilege in bringing suits for gold payments that the Administration wants the pending legislation passed withdrawing the privilege of suing in matters pertaining to the currency.

* * *

Now the PWA program for building cheap houses also has encountered sovereignty trouble. In Louisville some landholders refused to part with their real estate when Government agents sought to purchase it. The Government attempted to condemn the land, under its power of eminent domain. That is another attribute of sovereignty—the doctrine that a government has power, when necessary in the public interest, to dynamite buildings, seize property, order a right-of-way through your front lawn and such. Such action, to stand, must be shown to be a public necessity.

When PWA sought to use this power to seize land for building a real estate development, the Federal lower court and then the circuit court both held that this was not a public use. Building an apartment house was not a public necessity even though the Government was doing it.

* * *

The power of eminent domain, like that of immunity from suit, is one inferred by the courts as an attribute of sovereignty. The Government tried to make out a case that such low-cost housing projects met the requirement of public necessity because they would reduce unemployment and give persons of low income an opportunity to improve their circumstances of living. The two lower courts have questioned that and the case may now reach the Supreme Court.

Thus the issue goes back to the question raised by President Roosevelt in his famous press conference following the NRA decision, namely: Shall the Federal Government have power to deal with economic and social conditions?

If this decision holds, much of the works program, except where consent of all affected property owners can be obtained, would come into question.

Political Parade: Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa, one of the leading Republican presidential prospects, may have to fight a rear guard action in Iowa. Several persons are trying to take the senatorial nomination away from him next year. The situation has reached the worry stage . . . Gov. Nice of Maryland, one of the few Republican Governors elected last fall, partly because he insisted that, although a Republican, he could get more money out of the New Deal than Old Dealer Ritchie, is now crossing the country denouncing Roosevelt at every stop . . . A former Pulitzer prize-winning journalist has moved into the Townsend old-age pension headquarters to steer its publicity . . . Postmaster General Farley's weak spot as a party organizer has been women. Politically he's a man's man and the women feel neglected.

Administration leaders think the first blast of the utilities lobby investigation has turned the tide which was running against Roosevelt in the death sentence fight. The $300,000 utilities lobby expenditure looks like a big slush fund in the headlines. Actually the lawyers picked off a large chunk of it for legal advice. Senators and Representatives got mostly arguments and slaps on the back and probably no money . . . Some who were at the Jefferson Island party with President Roosevelt came back thinking he would not be very angry if Congress let the tax bill go over until fall. He's made his fight for immediate action and if the opponents would cease questioning his sincerity, they might find enough Administration Democrats to manage an early adjournment . . . Don't look for any big gesture from Mr. Roosevelt to pacify the right-wingers. At least that's what some of his closest friends say . . . They say Congressmen don't work. Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee was found laboring at his office at 5 o'clock on the hottest Sunday afternoon of the year. No air-cooling either.

Democratic crab-feast festivities at Jefferson Island, where President Roosevelt and high officials were guests of old-fashioned Southern Democrats Sunday, were interrupted by an unscheduled burst of song.

It was the "Marseillaise." Some of the right-wing Democrats present thought for a moment that the Roosevelt revolution was being proclaimed.

But it was only three comrades celebrating, between drinks, Bastille Day.

Market Trends Held to Justify Gold Suits Law

Morgenthau Tells Senate They Show U. S. Credit Not in Peril.

By the Associated Press.

The trend of the Government bond market was cited by Secretary Morgenthau yesterday as evidence a law prohibiting gold clause suits against the Government would not endanger national credit.

Morgenthau, in a letter to the Senate Banking Committee, said an advance in the Government bond market had occurred since President Roosevelt proposed legislation to thwart suits against the Government to recover for losses allegedly suffered because of abrogation of gold clause contracts in Government obligations.

Morgenthau's views had been sought by the committee after several members, including two former Secretaries of the Treasury—Senators Glass (Democrta), Virginia, and McAdoo (Democrat), California—had suggested it would hurt Government credit.

He was asked to come before the committee personally, but instead sent the letter saying that he could not see that the legislation would have "any noticeable effect on the Government's credit." The committee late yesterday asked him to appear tomorrow. Chairman Fletcher, of the committee, explained that Morgenthau had just returned to the city after an absence of several days and had not had a chance "to consider the matter."

A House committee already has approved the legislation and it is on the House calendar, scheduled to be taken up Thursday.

Morgenthau's letter said:

"Since the President forwarded to the Congress his message on this subject there has been no weakness in the Government bond market. On the contrary there has been an advance. The gold clause bonds, by reason of the fact that they bear rates of interest above those now required, are selling considerably above par, and, hence, will not be offered by their holders at par.

"There is no implication in the resolution of a Congressional or Treasury intent not to pay principal and interest in full on Government obligations. Indeed, the resolution expressly reaffirms the determination of the Congress and the Treasury to assure that the United States will continue to pay to the holder of all its securities principal and interest dollar for dollar on an equal and uniform basis."

Esgate Appointed To Farm Credit Job

By the Associated Press.

Appointment of Arthur T. Esgate, former Phoenix, Ariz., banker, as deputy governor of the Farm Credit Administration was announced yesterday by W. I. Myers, governor of the administration.

He has been deputy intermediate credit commissioner and director of the Regional Agricultural Credit Corporations during the last two years. Prior to that he was with the Reconstruction Corporation for a short time. He began his business career at Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Esgate is a past president of the Arizona Bankers Association and for three years was a member of the Executive Council of the American Bankers Association.

Farley Uncertain On Vacation Trip

Due to Start Today but He Can't Be Sure He Will.

By the Associated Press.

Postmaster General Farley was still doubtful last night that he would get away on his six-week "pleasure trip" today.

At the end of a busy day, climaxed by an interview with President Roosevelt, Farley said he might be back at the office again today.

Appointments to the new social security commission, the Wagner act's National Labor Board and other commissions were the subject of Farley's talk with the President.

The Postmaster General plans a six-week vacation, including a visit to Yellowstone Park and a trip to the Hawaiian Islands. "No politics" will be the rule, he declared.

Farm Program At a Standstill In the Senate

Fourth Day of DebateFinds Controversial AAA Items Unsettled.

By the Associated Press.

Administration plans for swift enactment of legislation to patch up and extend its farm adjustment program made little progress in the Senate yesterday.

The fourth day of debate on the farm amendments found most of the controversial items unsettled. These included crop price fixing, ratification of present processing tax rates, the outlawing of tax recovery suits and the plan for using customs receipts to finance exports of surpluses.

Only trivial progress was made during a day featured by a heated attack and defense of the price-fixing provision in the bill.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, branded it as "unworkable," while Senator Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, replied that such a program of price fixing several years ago "resulted in loss of the crop for an entire year."

While farmers in his State approved the AAA, Bailey said, the tobacco producers viewed "with utmost alarm" any change in their present system of marketing.

"It undertakes," the North Carolinian continued, "to offer a reward by means of a minimum price to induce return of a system that practically ruined the farmer for three or four years."

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, declared the price-fixing program was "entirely constitutional," although he could not at once cite for Byrd an instance where it had proved successful in a marketing program.

With foes hacking at the bill from both sides of the chamber, Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, in charge of it, lashed his committee members for not supporting the amendments which they had attached to the measure after it passed the House. But he won only negative results.

Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho, a committee member who had sponsored inclusion of poultry in the list of commodities subject to marketing agreements and price-fixing, said the amendment had been later disapproved by the American Farm Bureau and other agencies. For that reason he asked and received consent to have it eliminated.

Bees went out, too, amid laughter, under Senator Glass' (Democrat), Virginia, attack of ridicule and his charge that the measure sought to require him and the Secretary of Agriculture to regulate his queen bee.

This made nearly a clean sweep of commodities added to the list by the Senate committee, for earlier fruits for canning and hops had been trimmed off. Tentatively soy beans were approved but Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, said he may later ask reconsideration of that item.

Further, Senator King (Democrat), Utah, gave notice he would seek to have milk removed from the list.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 15.—Federal District Judge Elisha H. Brewster today said the processing tax under AAA is likely to be found unconstitutional by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Judge Brewster referred to the case of the Hoosac Mill, of New Bedford, Taunton and North Adams, now before the circuit court. The mill has challenged the constitutionality of the processing tax.

"A decision probably will be handed down tomorrow," Judge Brewster said. "The processing tax is likely to be held bad law."

He continued a temporary injunction against the Government, preventing it from collecting processing taxes amounting to more than $100,000 from the Taber Mill, the Wamsutta Mill, the Neild Manufacturing Co., the Nashawena Mill, all of New Bedford, and the Hartwell Corporation, of Fall River. He took the case of the five mills, which also contend that the processing tax is illegal, under advisement.

The Hoosac Mill case has been before the circuit court since April 24.

Adjournment Drive Menaces New Tax Plans

Dean Acts Today for Close July 23; Stampede in Congress Feared.

bringing Congress to an early close was confined almost entirely to Senate Republicans, and their demands were more moderate than those advanced in the House Democratic movement.

Senate Minority Leader McNary suggested that Congress recess until November, returning in the fall to round out the tax phase of the President's program. Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), Delaware, backed this up with a joint resolution. Senate leaders frowned on the suggestion.

Within the week, however, Democratic sentiment, not for a recess, but for a sine die adjournment, has overshadowed the Republican maneuver. In the Senate, Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, a physician by profession, suggested that the physical strain was not conducive to good legislation. This was echoed in the House by Representative Tom Blanton, of Texas, who took the floor last week with an adjournment appeal.

Cheered Three Minutes.

Yesterday, when Deen took the House floor to appeal for adjournment, he was cheered for three minutes. He said he later decided to offer the resolution for a July 25 adjournment, when a number of members approached him with promises of support.

Almost insurmountable difficulties lay in the path of the resolution, however. Even assuming 218 members (a majority of the House), signed his discharge petition before July 23, under rigid House rules there is virtually no likelihood of a House vote until the following month, and by that time, the date mentioned in the resolution would be passed.

After that, the Senate would have to concur in the action. And Progressives, led by Senator Robert M. LaFollette, jr., of Wisconsin, are determined not to permit Congress to adjourn, if they can help it, until the "tax-the-wealthy" program is enacted into law.

Deen said he was proposing adjournment "for the best interests of the Administration and the Democratic Party."

"It will be doing the Democratic Party and the country as a whole a great injustice to hold Congress here longer," he said.

In one quarter reflecting Administration views, it was pointed out that the comparatively simple adjournment issue is complicated with vast political considerations. Outstanding among these, it was said, is the campaign dynamite exposed by allowing the "share-the-wealth" program to go over until an election year.

Says Plan May Wait.

On the other hand, Deen told the House that "this share-the-rich and save-the-poor legislation, some of which I am in favor of, can wait six months longer."

"The rich will not get too rich and wealth can be shared and the poor be taken care of."

But the argument that hit home with House members was his citation of "the fact that more than 20 of our colleagues are now either in hospitals or at their homes suffering from heart trouble or nervous break down."

"This Congress has worked long and faithfully and well," he added, "and, personally, I insist that the Senate bring its business to an end so that we may agree on matters that must be agreed upon between the House and Senate, and that all future hearings on bills, many of which I am for, be extended until a session in the fall or the next session beginning in January."

The back of the adjournment movement was materially stiffened last week by indications of an indefinitely prolonged fight in House and Senate before the President's proposals near the enactment stage. The House may successfully curtail extraneous amendments by the gag procedure usual on revenue legislation, but there is no such curb in the Senate. Manifold amendments, from both the Senate conservative and extreme liberal fronts, conceivably can hold Congress in session until fall.

Decision to hold subcommittee hearings beginning Monday on pure food and drug legislation further complicated the legislative impasse. Representative Virgil Chapman (Democrat), Kentucky, was designated chairman of the Interstate Commerce subcommittee which will consider the measure. He said the President wanted the bill passed this session.

Phillips Laughs At Loss Feared On Russian Deal

relations between this country and Soviet Russia, the chief objectors to be the newly made agreement are persons interested in the manganese industry. Senator Patrick McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, whose State is a small producer of manganese, yesterday denounced the agreement to extend this proposed tariff reduction to the Soviets and announced he would offer an amendment to the pending AAA bill to repeal the reciprocal tariff act, adopted in June, 1934.

J. Carson Adkerson, president of the American Manganese Producers Association, announced that industries affected by the trade agreements would appeal to Congress "to save American industry for American workmen" and that "a suit will be instituted in the courts to determine the constitutionality of the authority of State Department to negotiate foreign trade treaties without the specific ratification of the Senate as provided by the Constitution."

Adkerson declared that "the backdoor methods of the State Department in negotiating foreign trade pacts, to the destruction of American industry, must be stopped," adding that the reduction in the manganese duty meant a loss of $2,500,000 annually to the Treasury in customs. He maintained the reduction would have no effect in lowering the price of manganese, but would hurt the domestic industry, "essential to our national defense," and "deny employment to from 5,000 to 7,000 men at a time when this employment is sorely needed."

Phillips, at his press conference, ridiculed the contention that "thousands of men" would be thrown out of work by reducing the manganese duty. He said that the total number employed in the domestic manganese mining industry was only 354 in the boom year of 1929, and that the domestic production represented but 10 per cent of the country's consumption.

Wallace Against Tariff To Build Pulp Industry

By the Associated Press.

Development of the American pulpwood and paper industry to the fullest extent possible without resorting to subsidy or tariff was urged by Secretary Wallace yesterday in a report to the Senate.

With proper forest conservation on a sustained yield basis, he said, American production might be expected in a few decades to supply the home market with eventual use of as much as 500,000,000 acres of forest land.

"Whether it would be for the best interest of the country," the Secretary said, "to become completely self-sufficient in wood pulp and paper, or whether it would be best to continue to import part of our requirements in exchange for commodities we export, can not be accurately forecast at this time."

Sale of Liquor In Kegs Written Into House Bill

Provision Has Limitations, but Is Another Jab at Treasury Views.

By the Associated Press.

The House Ways and Means committee yesterday took a second, but somewhat softened, poke at Secretary Morgenthau's ideas on how the Federal Government should regulate liquor.

Morgenthau had differed openly with the committee on two specific points: Whether the new control agency should be independent or under the Treasury, and whether distillers should be permitted to sell liquor in kegs and barrels.

The committee already had answered the first by voting, over Morgenthau's protest, that a new agency known as the Federal Alcohol Control Administration should be created as a "division" in the Treasury Department. Thus it placed on the Treasury chief's shoulders the responsibility for enforcement of the law.

And yesterday, despite Morgenthau's assertion that it would take an "army" of enforcement agents, the committee voted to permit sales in kegs and barrels.

Somebody, however, squeezed through a "compromise." It was an amendment, adopted 13-to-3 in secret session, which stipulated that keg sales could be made only to hotels, bona fide clubs and wholesalers who hold blenders and rectifiers licenses.

That, it was argued, removed the possibility of widespread law evasions by forbidding thousands of retailers the right to sell hard liquor from barrels.

Left in the bill, too, were a number of restrictions the new Alcohol Control Administration could impose upon those who did obtain licenses, such as the stipulations against interlocking directorates and unfair trade practices or advertising. The latter two would forbid belittling a competitor's product or using labels which misinform or fail to give essential and correct information to purchasers.

Leaders hope to get this bill on the House floor and pass it Thursday or Friday after three hours' debate.

"Princess Alice" and Paulina Sail for Wedding, Visit Abroad

Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth and her 10-year-old daughter, Paulina, will sail on the S. S. Manhattan tomorrow for a six weeks' stay in Europe.

Prominent in their itinerary are a visit at Berkeley Castle, in England, and a brilliant wedding in Paris.

"Princess Alice" and her daughter will go first to the castle, which is the home of her childhood friend, the former Molly Lowell, of Chestnut Hill, Mass., now the Countess of Berkeley. The history of the castle goes back to the days of Richard the Lionhearted. An English king, Richard II, was murdered in one of its dungeons in 1327 and Queen Elizabeth was a visitor there 245 years later.

After a two weeks' stay at Berkeley Castle, Mrs. Longworth and Paulina will go to Paris, there to attend the wedding of Jose Laval, daughter of the French premier, and Count Rene de Chambrun on August 26. Count de Chambrun is the son of Mrs. Longworth's sister-in-law, who was Clara Longworth, of Cincinnati.

Kennedy Opens New Assaults On Utility Bill

Measure Fails to Define 'Public Interest,' Says SEC Head.

Renewing his attack on standards set up in the House draft of the Wheeler-Rayburn utility holding company bill, Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, reiterated yesterday that the measure fails to adequately define "public interest."

Kennedy's views were outlined in a letter to Representative Samuel B. Pettengill (Democrat), Indiana, who had challenged Kennedy's assertion that the House bill set up no effective standards to guide the commission in administering the law.

Choice between the House draft, which charges the commission with elimination of "unnecessary" holding companies, and outright dissolution provisions of the Senate bill, rested meanwhile with a conference committee of the two houses.

Pettengill replied at once, on receiving Kennedy's letter, requesting the Securities and Exchange Commission chairman "to prepare a definition of 'public interest' and declaration of 'effective' standards which in your judgment should be incorporated in the bill."

"I am unable to comprehend in what respect Section 1(a) can be held to define public interest so as to furnish a standard for administration of Section 11," Kennedy wrote Pettengill yesterday.

"Section 1(a) merely discloses that public utility holding companies and their subsidiaries are affected with a national public interest because, among other things, their securities are widely distributed and their service and other contracts are performed through the mails and instrumentalities of interstate commerce and these practices affect interstate commerce and make effective State regulation impossible.

"It is hardly sensible to urge that a congressional declaration that a business is affected with a public interest is equivalent of a definition of the public interest which should guide the commission in permitting or prohibiting a continuance of existent holding company systems."

Kennedy said the "recital of abuses" in Section 1(b) of the House bill will be "helpful" in determining the nature and scope of the rules and regulations which the commission is authorized to make.

"But no definition of public interest can be drawn from these abuses, which would afford to the commission any effective standard for determining the fundamental economic policy as to the number of integrated systems a holding company shall be allowed to retain," he added.

Kennedy told Pettengill there was "nothing in the language to which you referred me or, for that matter in the whole House bill, that can guide the commission in determining whether the public interest requires that a given holding company system shall embrace one or ten public utility systems."

Pettengill, in his reply, expressed regret that the House committee "did not have the benefit of your valued criticism until the House bill was before the Senate for action."

"I have such a high regard for you and the splendid job you are doing that it is unpleasant for me to differ with you on this matter," he wrote Kennedy. "I do so only in justice of our committee, who worked so tirelessly with a complex and difficult problem, and to the members of the House, who approved and ratified our work."

Pettengill repeated that "if better definitions of the public interest can be drawn and better standards can be defined, I would welcome them."

"It is easy to criticize; hard to construct," Pettengill's reply concluded. "In your reply you offer nothing constructive. I now invite you to do so. I do so in justice to our committee and the House of Representatives."

HOFFMAN PHILIP.

Hoffman Philip Is Selected as Envoy to Chile

Minister at Norway Named Ambassador; Biddle Going to Oslo.

President Roosevelt yesterday promoted Hoffman Philip, veteran diplomat and now Minister to Norway, to be Ambassador to Chile, to succeed Hal H. Sevier, of Texas, who recently resigned because of illness.

Philip will be succeeded at the Oslo legation by Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., Philadelphia clubman and captain of the United States court tennis teams against British and French teams in 1933 and 1934. In the latter year he won the tennis championship of France.

Along with the nominations of Philip and Biddle, the President sent to the Senate the name of Cornelius Van H. Engert, of San Francisco, to be a Consul General. Engert, in the United States foreign service since 1912, has had a wide experience in the Near East and recently was assigned to the legation at Addis Ababa, where he will act as Charge d'Affaires. His last post was at Cairo, Egypt.

Meanwhile the Senate confirmed John Dickinson, former Assistant Secretary of Commerce, as an Assistant Attorney General in charge of anti-trust prosecutions. He succeeds Harold M. Stephens, promoted as assistant to the Attorney General when William Stanley resigned that post to re-enter the private practice of law. Dickinson formerly was professor of law at the University of Pennsylvania.

Philip, the new Ambassador to Chile, was born in Washington July 13, 1872. He entered the consular service in 1901 and was promoted through the grades to his present post. In 1912 he was chief of the division of Near Eastern affairs in the State Department. He also served as American Minister to Colombia, Uruguay and Persia, in addition to Norway.

Biddle was born in Philadelphia December 17, 1897, the son of Anthony J. Drexel Biddle and Cordelia Bradley. He served with the Marine Corps in France, reaching the grade of major. He was named a lieutenant colonel in the Marine reserve last year.

He was educated at the Delancey School in Philadelphia and St. Paul School at Concord, where he was president of the graduating class, captain of the crew and football teams and winner of the wrestling and boxing championships of the school. After the war he went into the shipping business. His wife was the former Margaret A. Thompson, daughter of Col. and Mrs. William Boyce Thompson, of New York.

Biddle is a close friend of Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania and returned from Paris last year to help his friend during the gubernatorial campaign. Gov. Earle resigned as minister to Austria to run for the governorship.

President Roosevelt by executive order yesterday exempted Charles Lee Cooke, ceremonial officer of the State Department, from compulsory retirement for age for one year. Cooke, well-known to all Capital socialites, will be 70 years old on July 22. He was sent to Ethiopia as ceremonial officer to the special American mission in 1930 to the coronation of Emperor Hailie Selassie. He may now remain in his present post until August 1, next year.

Islands Quiz To Be Resumed By the Senate

Officials Scoff at Pearson Resignation Rumors; Successors' Plentiful.

By the Associated Press.

Continuation of hearings either tomorrow or Thursday in the Senate Virgin Island investigation was announced yesterday by Chairman Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, of the investigating committee.

Meanwhile, Interior Department officials privately scoffed at rumors concerning the imminent resignation of Gov. Pearson, the naming of a successor and the possibility of the administration of the tiny Caribbean storm center being turned back to the Navy Department.

The rumors were characterized as "guesswork—all dead wrong."

The stories, however, persisted. Latest to be mentioned for the governorship was Rear Admiral William V. Pratt, retired chief of naval operations, whose selection was said to be favored by the Administration.

PWA Housing Is Held Invalid By Appeal Court

opinion, within the scope of the powers delegated to the Government," the majority asserted, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

Judges Charles H. Moorman and Xenophen Hicks joined in declaring that although it is settled that the power of eminent domain belongs to the Government as an attribute of its sovereignty, the power can be used only when property is taken for a public use.

The two jurists swept away as unjustified the Government's argument that this requirement was satisfied by a low-cost housing project, first, because such work would relieve unemployment, and, secondly, the leasing or selling of the new buildings at reasonable prices would give persons of low income an opportunity to improve their living conditions.

Woman Judge Dissents.

The two jurists also objected that the act authorizing housing projects failed to specify any standard to guide the President in exercising the powers conferred on him, pointing out that "nothing is said as to what shall be deemed a slum or low-cost house or housing project," nor where such projects should be established, nor was "any limitation or requirement imposed upon the administrator with reference to the spending of money appropriated for these purposes."

"All of this," the majority added, "is left to the unfettered discretion or choice of the President through his administrator without any standard by which he is to act."

Judge Florence Allen, the third member of the Appellate Court and the only woman to hold so high a judicial office, dissented from the majority. She contended that the power of eminent domain might be exercised "wherever necessary and proper for carrying into execution the power of taxation and appropriation for the general welfare."

"The problem of slum elimination throughout the Nation lies within a domain which the individual States can not reach and over which the Congress alone has power," Judge Allen asserted. "This is an argument for—not against—the legality of this enactment so far as it constitutes an exercise of the taxing power to provide for the general welfare."

Cleavage Like on NRA.

Thus the cleavage over this question was similar to that occurring over other New Deal measures, such as NRA. Indeed, the Circuit Court closely followed the Supreme Court's ruling that power may not be delegated to the President without setting up a specific standard to guide him or his aids.

On one side of the Louisville housing case, just as in most legal controversies over the New Deal, was the majority of the Appellate Court adopting a strict construction of the Federal Government's limitations, holding that it must confine itself to the specific functions set forth in the Constitution. On the other side was the attitude of Judge Allen, and that of the New Deal, that whatever is for the general welfare of the country is justified and valid.

It has not been decided whether the Administration will ask the Supreme Court to pass on the question of whether the power of eminent domain includes authority to acquire by condemnation property for housing projects. Justice Department attaches and Ickes contended that more time was needed to study the opinion before it could be decided whether to appeal.

Nevertheless it is a question as important as many of those which have been taken before the Supreme Court, with disastrous results, in most cases, for the New Deal. Not only does the Cincinnati court decision restrict, and probably will make more costly, the low-cost housing problem, but it may act to restrict other New Deal programs, such as the TVA project and the acquisition of land for rural electrification under the works relief act.

Doubt on State's Power.

Although Ickes feels he can go ahead despite this decision, it is conceded that unless it is reversed it has made his task more difficult. In many instances where many persons own or have an equity in a large tract of land condemnation proceedings are necessary to get clear titles to the property. Even though most of the owners are willing to sell for a reasonable price it frequently happens that a small minority either hold out for a high price or can not be found.

This was the situation in regard to the land the Government was seeking for the Louisville housing project. Owners of 85 per cent of the land involved had given the PWA voluntary options to purchase their holdings for $244,722. The other 15 per cent of the owners refused to sell at prices agreeable to the PWA so condemnation proceedings were started to acquire the entire tract for $347,668. This action was struck down when the district court sustained a demurrer filed by Edward J. Gernert, one of the owners.

The decision, moreover, is expected to make it more costly for the PWA to buy land because owners will be strengthened in holding out for a high price by the thought that the Government cannot force them to sell.

Ways Around Law Seen.

Ickes hopes to be able to surmount the obstacles put in his path by the decision by having States or municipal governments, acting under authority of their Constitutions and charters institute the condemnation proceedings. It is not known, however, how many States and municipalities have authority to condemn land for that purpose.

Still another by-path around the court decision was outlined in a PWA statement which explained that "it will be possible to install, on vacant land, housing projects which will be available for families now living in slum dwellings, thus syphoning families out of substandard housing without direct demolition of slum areas."

"In many cases cities have already agreed to demolish an equal number of substandard dwellings under their police power to the number provided for by the housing project involved," the statement added.

The Louisville project was being planned to take care of 460 families at a total cost for the project of $1,618,000. Of the $249,000,000 earmarked for housing projects, $169,000,000 has been allotted to specific projects.

Rookie Bailiff Nabs Notables OfMontgomery

Judge, Banker and Lawyer Among Day's Catches on Traffic Counts.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post.
1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Judge Harold C. Smith of the Montgomery County Police Court at Rockville was among the first to fall victim to Rockville's new town bailiff, Leslie B. Thompson. The new policeman, acting under orders from the Town Council, began a drive against overtime parkers and double parking.

Judge Smith was not alone, however. The summons book used by Thompson on overtime parkers was filled with the names of prominent citizens of the county before the day was finished. The judge had a good alibi, too. He was in court hearing cases.

Among the others who were summoned to appear at Rockville police headquarters to post collateral were former State's Attorney Albert M. Bouic, Rockville attorney; P. C. Ransdell, vice president of the Montgomery County National Bank at Rockville; John T. Williams, deputy clerk in the county commissioners' office; Henry Ransom, manager of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Rockville office.

Judge Smith will be saved the embarrassment of trying his own case, however. Those who were given summons yesterday will be warned when they appear at the clerk's desk and will not have to go to court.

Willis A. Poole, of Cedar Grove, was found guilty of charges of possession of intoxicating liquor with intent to sell yesterday by Judge Smith. Poole appealed a fine of $500, which was imposed by Judge Smith, and posted bond for his appearance in circuit court.

Poole told the court that his health required the use of liquor and that he was making it for his own consumption, but two revenue agents testified that it is a violation of the law even if the liquor is for personal consumption unless the still has a license and excise stamps are affixed to the product.

Arrested in connection with the theft of $10 from the home of Mrs. Helen Weedon in Rockville, Walter Shirley, colored, also confessed that he had forged the name of Warner E. Pumphrey, Rockville funeral director and a brother of Mrs. Weedon, to a check.

A warrant alleging forgery was sworn out by Reuben Riggs for the Montgomery County National Bank and further charges involving the theft and another robbery at the same house will be placed today according to Sergt. Roy Bodmer, who arrested the man.

Shirley had been employed by the Pumphreys and Mrs. Weedon for more than five years and was a trusted employe.

More than a score of residents of the Conduit road communities adjoining Glen Echo appeared to protest a petition for rezoning from residential to commercial of several lots owned by Alfred Z. Frizzell on Wakoning road, Glen Echo Heights, at a hearing held last night in the Bethesda County Building.

Included in the group were Mayor H. T. McCuen of Glen Echo and C. H. Godbold, president of the Cabin John Park Citizens Association. Chief Engineer Irving C. Root, of the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission, opposed the petition on behalf of the commission.

Commissioner Robert D. Hagner, of Bethesda, will recommend to the board of county commissioners today the resurfacing of Kennedy drive and parts of Dorsett avenue and Chamberlin drive in Kenwood, and of sections of Battery lane and Glenbrook road in Battery Park, it was announced yesterday. The county road employes are now making a systematic patching of all streets in the western suburban district.

Preparations are being made at Camp Wilson, Burnt Mills, to care for hundreds of Boys Scouts who will come here this summer to attend the jamboree in Washington August 10. The camp has been designated as the overflow camp for boys attending the jamboree, who can not be accomodated at the main camp on Columbia Island.

The Rev. J. Wesly Loftis, pastor of the Silver Spring Baptist Church and Scout commissioner for the second division of the District of Columbia, is director of the camp, assisted by a staff of four. The camp is near Silver Spring.

The Lions Club of Silver Spring, will meet tonight at 6:30 at the Falkland Manor, Silver Spring. The new officers will preside.

Raleigh S. Chinn, president of the Rockville Chamber of Commerce announced yesterday that the chamber will not hold an outing this summer as has been the custom for several years.

The quarterly meeting and fellowship dinner of the Rockville Baptist Church will be held tomorrow night in the Sunday School assembly room. Reports of officers will be heard, and plans for the remainder of the year will be discussed.

Funeral services for Mrs. Harriet Chapman Fagan, 58, who died suddenly of a heart attack Saturday afternoon at her home in Linden, will be held in St. Paul's Church, Washington, tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mrs. Fagan, who was born in Washington, was an employe of the United States Patent Office. She was the wife of the late Mathias Fagan and had resided in Linden for 10 years.

Surviving are a brother, Ralph Chapman, of Washington, and two sisters, Miss Belle Chapman and Mrs. William Curtis Wilton, both of Linden.

Funeral services for Charles Percy Ott, 66, former Western Union Telegraph Co. employe, who died Sunday at his home in Silver Spring, will be held this evening at 8 o'clock from the Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home, 8424 Georgia avenue, Silver Spring. The Rev. Clyde Brown, of Washington, former rector of Grace Church, Woodside, will officiate. Burial will take place tomorrow at 2 p. m. at Everett, Pa.

A native of Everett, Mr. Ott was employed as a telegraph operator there for a number of years by the Western Union Telegraph Co. In 1918 he was transferred by that company to Washington, where he was assigned to the bookkeeping department. He was retired July 1 after 45 years' service.

He moved to Silver Spring with his family in 1932 and was a member of Grace Church, Woodside. His death followed a paralytic stroke last Wednesday.

Besides his widow, Mrs. Amy Ott, he is survived by a daughter, Miss Martha Ott, and four sons, Howard M., James R., Nelson S. and Mason L., all of Silver Spring. He also leaves a sister, Miss Amelia B. Ott, of Everett.

This institution is being brought to Arlington County through the efforts of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce, it was revealed.

Tydings Saves Ickes From Claws of Crab

By the Associated Press.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, disclosed yesterday that he had saved Secretary Ickes from the claws of a crab during their week-end trip with the President to the Jefferson Rod and Gun Club on Chesapeake Bay.

Tydings said a crab grabbed the Secretary's leg while they were swimming and he shook it loose.

The Senator and Ickes clashed at white heat last week over the Senate's investigation of the administration of the Virgin Islands by the Interior Department. The week-end outing apparently witnessed no show of hard feelings between the two.

U. of M. Raises Its Standards Of Scholarship

Board Approves Plan to Require Fixed Grades for Subject Choices.

Raising of scholastic standards for the University of Maryland was approved yesterday as Acting President H. C. Byrd presided for the first time as head of the university senate.

The senate placed its official approval on a recommendation requiring that "no student be certified as a junior, or be permitted to select a major or a minor subject, or to continue in a fixed curriculum, until he or she shall have passed with an average of 'C' the minimum number of semester credits required for junior standing in any curriculum."

Originally there was no fixed requirement for a scholastic standing for students selecting major and minor subjects.

Two recommendations from the faculty committee on scholarships also were approved by the senate. One provided that no student be eligible to hold a scholarship more than four full academic years. The other provided that "scholarships automatically be continued for all students who maintain a scholastic average of 1.75."

The senate also approved several proposals from Dr. C. O. Appleman, dean of the graduate school, whereby the university may determine whether it will approve credits given by junior colleges.

50 Girls Strike Over Wage Cut At Alexandria

Walk-Out Comes as Surprise, Century Company Officials Say.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 933.

Approximately 50 girls employed by the Century Manufacturing Co., located at the southeast corner of Columbus and Wilkes streets, went on strike yesterday morning, walking out at 7:30 a. m., the opening hour. This action was in protest over a 10 per cent cut in wages which was to go into effect yesterday. The number on strike, it is said, is about one-third of the working force of the plant.

It was stated at the plant that last Friday a representative of the company informed the workers of the proposed cut in salary, the workers, however, being promised steady work of 44 hours per week, if they so desired. This would bring their wages up to the amount prior to the cut. The company representatives believed the arrangement had been accepted by the workers and the walk-out of yesterday was a surprise.

The managers of the plant stated the cut was made necessary in order that the firm might be able to compete with other firms engaged in the manufacture of similar merchandise—the making of work shirts.

The plant continued in operation yesterday and is expected to continue work.

Mrs. Virginia Wade Ryder, director of the playgrounds of Alexandria, and Policeman George Welker have completed plans for the organization of a playgrounds patrol. Officer Welker organized the school patrol with the cooperation of the American Automobile Association, which has been in force for several years during the school term.

Mrs. Ryder states the patrols will be equipped with badges and if plans are carried out will be functioning this week.

The Lyles-Couch Playground opened yesterday morning, to alternate with the Parker-Gray grounds, each to open three days a week. The Crouch grounds are to be open on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and the Parker-Gray on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The regular semimonthly meeting of Silver Moon Council, No. 15, Degree of Pocahontas, will be held tonight in Odd Fellows Hall. Officers of the council are Mrs. Annie Henry, prophetess; Mrs. Edna Humphries, Pocahontas; Mrs. Virginia Downs, Wenonah, and George Wells, Powhatan.

Funeral services for Arthur L. Padgett, 38, overseas veteran of the World War, who died Saturday night, were conducted yesterday at the residence, 226 North Fairfax street, by the Rev. E. V. Regester, D. D., pastor of the Del Ray Methodist Church South, and interment was in Bethel Cemetery.

Services at the grave were conducted by Russell Mitchell Post, No. 690, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and a volley was fired by a detail from the Alexandria Light Infantry, of which Padgett was a member during the war.

Alfred Harman, 45, died yesterday morning at his home, 20 West Maple street, Rosemont, Alexandria. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary G. Harman, and a small son. Mr. Harman was employed in the War Department in Washington, and was a member of Lebanon Lodge of Masons, of Washington.

The funeral will be held at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the home, conducted by the Rev. Dr. E. V. Regester, pastor of the Del Ray Methodist Episcopal Church South, and burial will be in Ivy Hill Cemetery. Masonic services at the grave will be conducted by Lebanon Lodge.

Under the amended ordinance for changing street names in Alexandria, recently adopted by the city council, the names of 23 streets in the annexed territory have been changed, in all instances abolishing duplications. Many of the streets in the subdivisions were named Washington, Braddock and Lloyd, causing confusion. The changes made follow:

Alexandria avenue in Oakville to Leadbeater street; Braddock avenue (Potomac) to Ashby street; Braddock Terrace (Mount Ida) to Uhler Terrace; Carrall avenue (Potomac) to Uhler avenue; Cedar street (Glendale) to Chestnut street; Cedar street (Mount Ida) to Pine street; Chapman avenue (Section 2, St. Elmo) to Herbert street; Dick street to Oak street; Lloyd avenue (Del Ray and Rosecrest) to Custis avenue; Lloyd avenue (Braddock) to Mason avenue; Lloyd avenue (Mount Ida) to Wyatt street; Maylee street (Mount Ida) to Sycamore street; Montrose avenue (Jefferson Park) to Fountaine street; Myrtle avenue (Mount Ida) to Mosby place; Myrtle avenue (Mount Vernon Park) to Myrtle street; Overlook place to Braxton place; Pitts avenue (Mount Ida) to Forrest street; Potomac avenue (North Washington street extended) to Powhatan street; Swann avenue (St. Elmo) to Helen street; Virginia avenue (Beaumont) to Reed avenue; Walnut street (Mount Ida) to Hickory street; Washington avenue (Braddock) to Monroe avenue; Washington avenue (Jefferson Park) to Taylor avenue; Windsor avenue, to be extended through Prosise property to Braddock road, Wololk avenue to Peeyton avenue.

Cabinet Spurns Lloyd George's New Deal Plan

Welshman Says He Will Take Fight to Nation at Next Election.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 15.—A final decision rejecting Lloyd George's "new deal" program for Great Britain, modelled after that in Washington, was reached tonight by the cabinet.

A detailed statement of reasons for the action will be published next Monday.

A prosperity loan of £250,000,000 (almost $1,250,000,000) for the financing of productive public works during the next two years formed the backbone of David Lloyd George's "new deal" proposals, made public in their entirety for the first time today.

The fact that the war-time premier was left out when the cabinet was reshuffled recently was generally interpreted as indicating Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's new government would spurn the proposals the little Welsh wizard first outlined January 17 and submitted to the cabinet March 14.

A report of the cabinet committee appointed to study the new deal scheme was expected to point out that several projects already had been put into effect while others were visionary.

Perhaps anticipating this, however, Lloyd George has said Britain can not eliminate the dole and return to prosperity by traditional methods but must use bolder plans. He has announced he will put the plan before the country at the forthcoming elections.

The government last week granted Lloyd George the right to publish his plans—and it is evident the white-haired Welshman has borrowed whole chapters from Washington's brain trusters.

Bus Regulation Bill Has New Obstacle

By the Associated Press.

The Administration's Senate-approved motor vehicle regulation bill, which has been stalemated in the House Interstate Commerce Committee for months, apparently met a new obstacle yesterday when the committee sent it back to another sub-committee.

One sub-committee, headed by Representative Huddleston(Democrat), of Alabama, recently brought in its own bill, much milder than the Senate measure. The full committee, however, last week substituted the Senate bill for consideration, scrapping the sub-committee bill outright.

The new sub-committee is headed by Representative Pettengill (Democrat), of Indiana.

President Roosevelt has urged action on the legislation this session. It would put motor carriers under Interstate Commerce Commission control.

Maj. Brown and Mayor Receive Identical Pleas

Last week Mayor LaGuardia of New York got a letter beginning:

"I am a mother and know lots of mothers in the same position as I am. Our husbands are young men, plainclothes policemen, and are mixed in with all knids of bad women and are never home at night."

The letter asked him to do something about it. It was made public.

Yesterday Chief of Police Brown of Washington received a letter, signed "Broken-hearted Wives," which began:

"I am a mother and know many more wives and mothers that are facing what I face. Our husbands are young men—plainclothes policemen—and are forced to get mixed up with all kinds of ruthless and bad women in their duties. They are never at home any more."

Parking Chislers Worry Cabinet Men

The Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Swanson, and the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Ickes, have been plunged into an interchange of correspondence because "outsiders" are muscling in on the parking space behind the Navy and Munitions Buildings.

It seems that employes of other than the Navy and War Departments—Agriculture is alleged to be the principal offender—have appropriated some of the choice parking spaces to their own use. This has aroused feeling to the extent that petitions are being circulated against the invasion.

Yesterday Secretary Swanson issued a ban against petitions, revealing that he and Secretary Ickes have exchanged several letters in an attempt to solve the problem and a special conference may be arranged. Mr. Ickes is involved as head of the department which administers the Government buildings branch.

2 Held in Slaying Kill Sheriff, Escape

Posses Trail Brothers in Colorado Mountains.

By the Associated Press.

Telluride, Colo., July 15.—Two men held in a starvation death case fatally wounded a sheriff with his own gun today and fled through mountainous southwestern Colorado in his car.

Firing a bullet into the head of Sheriff W. W. Dunlap, of Montezuma County while he and special Deputy Sheriff Clem Duncan, of Cortez were taking them to court for arraignment, Otis McDaniels, 30, and Herbert McDaniels, 20, brothers, threw the officers from the car and sped away.

Tonight all roads in this section were guarded as posses of southwestern Colorado and southeastern Utah hunted the fugitives.

The McDaniels brothers were arrested last May for the slaying of James, Westfall, pioneer stockman whose body, bound and gagged, was found on the floor of his cabin last April. A coroner's jury decided he died of starvation and exposure.

District Attorney James M. Noland, of Durango said the brothers confessed they had bound Westfall in an attempt to rob him.

Senators Boost Deficiency Bill By $73,027,689

Appropriations Committee Reports Measure for $297,505,251.

By the Associated Press.

Boosting the House figure by $73,027,689, the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday approved a $297,505,251 second deficiency bill to meet emergency obligations of the last fiscal year and to add new funds for the current period.

One of the largest items added was $18,000,000 for payment to Federal land banks as a result of the new act reducing interest on farm mortgages.

Other amendments added $12,000,000 for public building construction outside the District of Columbia, $10,150,000 for construction at military posts, $3,000,000 for the Texas Centennial Commission, $9,000,000 for increased Federal support of land-grant colleges and cooperative agricultural extension work.

The latter appropriation would go to the Agriculture Department. Another $960,000 for the same purpose would go to the Office of Education, Interior Department.

The committee also voted $1,478,852 for expense payments to envoys abroad because of the appreciation of foreign currencies.

Other items added included:

Quarters for officers at Quantico, Va., Marine barracks—$1,050,000.

Payment to Atlee Pomerene, of Ohio, and three associates named Harrison, Kirby and Crawford for representing the Government in the oil scandal cases—$300,000.

Refused a Nickel, Man Kills Woman

Panhandler Wounds Escort, Escapes With $5.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 15.—For a nickel, Leonora Rivera, 23, was killed today.

With Albert Martinez, 35, she was sitting on a bench in Morningside Park, resting in the early morning coolness after dancing.

"Can you spare a nickel, buddy?"

An overalled Negro shuffled up to Martinez with the request. The answer was "No."

Whipping out a long knife, the panhandler threw Martinez to the sidewalk and slashed him about the head, tearing $5 from his victim's pocket. Martinez, cut and his skull fractured, staggered to his feet.

A moment later a passerby on Morningside drive heard a woman screaming:

"Don't kill me. For God's sake don't kill me."

Police called to the scene, picked Martinez from the ground near 118th street and the park, seriously wounded. Miss Rivera was found—dead—at 116th street, stabbed under the heart.

Boy, 7, Drowned With 2 'Rescuers'

Woman and Guide Dive Into Lake After Child.

By the Associated Press.

Yonkers, N. Y., July 15.—A woman and a guide were drowned today in a futile attempt to save a 7-year-old boy who fell from a rowboat at Ultowanna Lake, near Old Forge, N. Y., close to the summer home of Dr. Leo H. Baekeland, noted inventor.

Mrs. Baekeland said those drowned were Mrs. Frank Schwartz, wife of a well-known artist; her nephew, Joseph Middlebrook, 7, and Richard Zandee, a guide.

Mrs. Schwartz and the boy set out for a row on the lake with Zandee and two girls from a nearby cottage.

Suddenly young Middlebrook toppled from the boat and Mrs. Schwartz and Zandee dived in after him, Mrs. Baekeland said she was informed.

Mrs. Baekeland said she did not have other details on teh drownings. She said Zandee was known as an expert swimmer.

The ntragedy was discovered when another guide saw the two little girls sitting in the floating rowboat. He brought them to shore, where the frightened children told the story.

The bodies of Mrs. Schwartz and the boy were recovered. A rescue party worked to recover Zandee's body.

His research included work at the University of Berlin under Dr. Karl Frieboes, three months at Munich with Dr. Leo Zumbusch, and five months at the Klinic Arzt at Vienna, from which he received a certificate for postgraduate study. He also studied plans for control of skin diseases in Denmark, Italy, France and England.

Truce Is Offered In Shipping Clash

Spurned by One Group in Mississippi Dock War.

By the United Press.

Gulfport, Miss., July 15.—Shipping interests drew up a truce today and presented it to two rival longshoremen's organizations in hopes of ending the port strife here until the Wagner labor relations act becomes effective.

The Gulfport Benevolent Association was said to have signed the truce, but the International Longshoremen's Association, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, ignored it.

I. L. A. pickets have blocked all roads to the wharves for a week. Their spokesmen charge that the benevolent group, which got a two-year contract to handle ships July 1, is a company union. All crafts affiliated with the Gulfport Central Labor Union are supporting the "locked-out" I. L. A.

The truce, presented by the Gulfport Maritime Association, which is composed of all interests at the port, allows both organizations to work on the docks, without discrimination, until Federal relations agents establish permanent peace.

Judge Suspends Sioux City Mayor

By the Associated Press.

Sioux City, Iowa, July 15.—The mayor of Sioux City was suspended from office today, two days after a "graft" grand jury had recommended his removal for failure to act on lawless conditions here.

The petition for removal of Mayor W. D. Hayes was filed by H. M. Havner and Ole Naglestad, special prosecutors for the grand jury and the suspension was ordered by District Judge A. O. Wakefield.

Attached to the petition was an affidavit by Charles I. Small, commissioner of streets, setting forth that Mayor Hayes, in a conversation regarding alleged graft and protection payoffs, had told him in substance, "we don't care how much money they get, Charles, as long as they leave us alone."

Mayor Hayes declined to comment on his suspension.

House Experts Begin to Draft Bill for Taxes

Committee Asks Parker and Beaman to Shape Levy Measure.

By the Associated Press.

The House yesterday put its own "brain trust" at work drafting the bill for the President's tax program.

The Ways and Means Committee asked Lovell H. Parker, chief of staff of the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue, and Middleton Beaman, House legislative counsel, to try to shape a tentative bill for the committee's consideration.

That the job was a big one was indicated by the estimate of Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, that it would be next week before the committee could go to work on the bill. He guessed that it would take the committee "about a week" to finish the job.

Profit Tax Favored.

Another development was growth in sentiment among Ways and Means committeemen for stiffer excess profits taxes instead of the proposed graduated levy on corporation incomes.

Those in charge of the tax and other bills said they knew of no plan to put them off, as was asked by Representative Deen, of Georgia, in his applauded speech asking early adjournment.

Parker and Beaman were not to suggest specific rates, but to try to draft the administrative features of the bill, covering such thorny problems as whether inheritances left to widows should be taxed less than those to children or others of "stranger blood" and how much, if any, life insurance should be exempt from inheritance taxes.

Arguments Advanced.

The advocates of the excess profits tax contended such a levy would be a good answer to those who opposed a graduated corporation income tax. In their study of the situation they found this:

There is, in the present law, a provision which allows corporations to fix what is called the "adjusted declared value" of their capital. On that they are allowed a 12½ per cent profit. All income above the 12½ per cent is subject to a 5 per cent tax.

In the 11 months ended with last May, the 5 per cent tax yielded $5,208,000. The proposed graduated corporation levy is estimated variously to bring in $67,000,000 to $102,000,000 a year. Proponents of the idea contended that it would be easy to raise that amount by reducing the allowable income to 10 per cent of the capital and stepping up the tax rate on all over that.

Thief Crashes Window In Effort to Escape

"Caught in the act" of shoplifting by a store detective, Willie Jones, colored, 38, 613 M street northwest, broke away from his captor and jumped through a plate-glass window in the Palais Royal department store yesterday.

Jones was seen coming through the window, mid a shower of glass, by Policeman E. A. Horseley, of the First Precinct, who gave chase and captured the man after a sprint of more than a block. Jones was arrested and charged with destroying private property and petty larceny.

Lassiter said he was watching the Shrine parade June 11, when he was struck on the head by the screen. Lewis H. Shapiro, attorney for the plaintiff, said that Lassiter was seriously injured.

SenoraMonreal Suicide in N.Y.; Drinks Poison

Divorced Wife of Ex-Naval Attache of Spain Dies in Hospital.

Slashing her right wrist and swallowing poison, Senora Frederico Monreal, divorced wife of the former naval attache of the Spanish Embassy, Frederico Monreal y Pilon, committed suicide in her midtown hotel room in New York yesterday.

Senora Monreal died in Bellevue Hospital, New York, several hours after she was admitted for treatment, the Associated Press reported.

Harold Tarnac, night manager of the hostelry, failed in an attempt to save her life after he found her sitting on the edge of her bed, bleeding from the razor-blade wound.

Questioned by detectives after she had revived and told of taking the poison, Senora Monreal said she had left Washington, July 8, intending to go to Battle Creek, Mich., for reducing treatments and a rest cure.

Officials of the hotel said she had registered there July 9 under her name by a former marriage, Mrs. Carolyn Harris.

Before her death, she gave 3301 Rittenhouse street, Washington, the present address of Secretary of War Dern, as her residence.

Senor Monreal y Pilon was transferred from the embassy here to active duty with the Spanish navy about two years ago.

At the present time, officials at the embassy said yesterday, he is in command of a vessel plying between Spain and the Balearic Islands. He is a native of Mallorca, principal of this Mediterranean group.

Embassy Notifies Him.

The embassy here immediately notified Senor Monreal y Pilon of his estranged wife's death.

He and the former Carolyn Harris were married secretly in New York about four years ago, and the wedding was not announced officially until the following winter. The couple moved in high diplomatic and social circles here, separating after about a year.

After they separated Senora Monreal lived at the Chevy Chase Club here, later residing in New York much of her time.

She was the mother of Mrs. Prescott Gatley, jr., whose husband is the son of Prescott Gatley, president of the National Savings & Trust Co. and the Chevy Chase Club.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed late yesterday.

Motorcycle Accident Fatal to Youth of 19

Samuel E. Shepherd, 19, of 3122 Fifteenth street northwest, died at 6 p. m. yesterday at Sibley Hospital two hours after he was injured in a motorcycle accident at North Capitol street and Truxton circle.

According to police Shepherd was proceeding north on North Capitol street when he lost control of his machine. He was thrown to the street and his skull fractured. It was the sixty-third traffic fatality of the year.

Woman Overcome by Heat.

Viola Weaver, 28, was overcome by the heat yesterday. After treatment at Casualty Hospital she returned to her home at 1371 North Carolina avenue northeast.

Treasury Considers New One-Mill Pieces

By the Associated Press.

The lowly penny may yet become "big money."

Treasury officials, it was reliably reported last night, are considering a plan for coinage of one-mill pieces. Consideration was prompted by the difficulties of States which have sales tax laws.

The States, the Teasury said firmly, can not issue one-mill tokens, coupons or stamps, as some of them had planned to do in order to provide less than a penny tax payments on small purchases.

The Treasury ruled this would be coinage of money, over which Congress has supreme authority. An act of Congress would be necessary before money in denominations less than one cent could be issued.

Student's Neck Broken On Bottom of Creek

John Koons, 17, son of Mrs. Dona Koons, of Falls Church, Va., is in a critical condition in Georgetown University Hospital with his neck fractured as result of a swimming mishap last Friday at Colvin Run, Va.

Together with two friends, David Crumbaugh and Buddy Wheeler, both 18, John went swimming. He dived and hit the creek bottom, breaking his neck. He was rescued by his companions.

John was a student last year at Leesburg High School, Leesburg, Va.

Flaming Youth In Need of Care, Institute Told

Fire in Young Folk Too Often Neglected, Catholic Speaker Asserts.

"Flaming youth"—its wayward tendencies and problems—was discussed yesterday, with plans for ultimate solution, at opening sessions of a three-week youth institute at the National Catholic School of Social Service, 2400 Nineteenth street northwest.

Daily meetings will be held. Representatives and speakers from Catholic organizations in all sections of the country are in attendance. A series of studies, outlining problems of youth, particularly young girls, are planned from day to day.

Yesterday's session opened with an address by Miss Anne Sarachon Hooley, president of the National Council of Catholic Women. In presenting problems of so-called "flaming youth" before the meeting, Miss Hooley said in part:

Universal Trait.

"We have had much talk, much writing and much lamentation about flaming youth. This flame is so universal a characteristic of youth, so necessary an item of success in that which youth must accomplish, so plainly a gift of an All-Wise Creator that it seems that we ought to approach it almost with a sense of reverence, certainly with understanding. And doing this we find that what we lament is not the flame of youth, but neglect of the flame.

"Fire properly fed and cared for has always been a great aid to man. But if fed with explosives and undirected, it becomes a roaring monster devouring all in its path. So it is with youth and leisure time. Having it, they often do not know how to use it."

As a solution to the "flaming youth" problem, Miss Hooley urged a carefully planned program to care for and instruct youthful America.

Vocational Guidance.

"We see for this youth," Miss Hooley declared, "a Catholic program, which will draw him or her into parish groups, furnishing vocational guidance, character building, strong social contacts and an outlet for energy in handicraft, drama, music, home building and other constructive work."

Other speakers included Rev. Vincent Mooney, director of the Youth Institute, National Council of Catholic Men; Katherine R. Williams, first vice president, National Council of Catholic Women, and Rev. Daniel A. Lord, S. J., director, Sodality of Our Lady, and Bishop of Charleston, S. C.

Tomorrow's session will be addressed by Government officials in charge of youth programs and problems. Speakers scheduled are Aubrey Williams and Josephine Roche, co-directors of the Government's youth program.

U. S. May Check African Recruit Campaign Here

Law Forbids Enlistments; Needy White Veteran Has 'Signed Up.'

Although a 28-year-old Federal statute forbids enlistments for foreign wars, a group calling itself the Universal Multitechnic Association set up shop here yesterday for the purpose of recruiting soldiers to serve Ethiopia's cause in its quarrel with Italy.

Queried as to what they intend to do about it, the State and Justice Departments and the Italian Embassy stated they haven't learned officially of this latest quirk in the Italo-Ethiopian situation and would reserve action pending further developments.

Meantime a slight, red-haired World War veteran sat on the stoop of 1135 Eighth street northwest and told wide-eyed neighbors of his plans to shoulder a rifle for Emperor Haile Selassie in far-off Africa. He is Charles H. Simmons, the first white man to sign up here.

Veteran of World War.

"I did it to get out of soup lines." This was Simmons' terse explanation of his decision to help the Ethiopian cause, a decision which has been reached by hundreds of African patriots, mostly colored, in New York's Harlem, where recruiting is in full sway.

Veteran of 27 months' service in the A. E. F., he is 37 years old and works irregularly. At present Simmons has a job moving furniture and equipment into the Department of Agriculture Building, but he doesn't know how long it will last.

Insurance up to $1,000 and transportation to Addis Ababa and return was promised him at the recruiting office which has been improvised at 1337 U street northwest, said Simmons.

"They'll send me out on the first ship," he declared, adding that he put down his name in a ledger and will fill out a form later.

The recruiting officer didn't mention anything about pay, but that failed to disturb his first white customer.

Not Worried About Pay.

"I'm willing to serve free of charge," Simmons said.

But this is what the United States Government, in section No. 22, title 18, U. S. Code annotated, has to say about enrolling fighting men for outside affairs.

"Whoever within the territory or jurisdiction of the United States enlists or enters himself, or hires or retains another person to enlist or enter himself, or to go beyond the limits or jurisdiction of the United States with intent to be enlisted or entered in the service of any foreign prince, state, colony, district or people as a soldier or as a marine or seaman on board any vessel of war, letter of marque or privateer shall be fined not more than $1,000 and imprisoned not more than three years."

Statute Enacted in 1818.

Originating in a statute enacted in 1818, this law has been in force since 1909.

An official of the Department of Justice, which is charged with its enforcement, said no official recognition has been taken yet of the enlistment campaign. The same comment was forthcoming from an official of the State Department.

United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, who would prosecute any action ordered by the Department of Justice, said this was the first he'd heard of U street recruiting.

"I may look into it unofficially," he remarked.

The Secretary of the Italian Embassy was similarly uninformed of the Ethiopian enlistment drive in Washington. He was not prepared to say whether a protest would be lodged with the State Department.

W. Va. Midshipman Is Missing in Norway

Oslo, Norway, July 15 (AP).—Midshipman Charles Kenneth Barr, of Wellsburg, W. Va., who disappeared from the United States Battleship Wyoming before it sailed from here to Copenhagen, was still missing tonight.

Oslo police, who appealed through newspapers and by radio for information regarding the American's whereabouts, are uncertain whether he met with an accident or disappeared voluntarily. It was learned that Barr, wearing his uniform, left the Wyoming the day of its arrival here and saw a girl, an old acquaintance, several times during the first few days the ship was here. The girl told police Barr did not appear in any manner depressed.

Another Banner Crowd Expected at Concert

Expecting another capacity audience, National Symphony Orchestra officials yesterday completed preparation for the second "Sunset Symphony" to be presented tomorrow at 8 p. m. Sound experts have made the necessary adjustments in the amplifying apparatus to assure all listeners absolute instrumental balance.

Although wishing to enlarge the capacity of the Watergate site, C. C. Cappel said that this is impractical. He urged patrons to buy tickets early to be sure of seats.

Dean of Capital's Bankers, Apostle of Hard Work, Was Ill 2 Weeks.

office until 1917, remaining thereafter as chairman of the board.

Despite his growing prominence and influence, Mr. Edson continued to use a modest office at the Equitable Cooperative Building Association's building in the 900 block of F street northwest. On his birthdays, surrounded by the floral tributes of his legion of friends, he would receive reporters and outline his views on the economic health of the country.

"Prosperity?" he would say. "Of course we will enjoy a return to prosperity, but there is no man living with intuition enough to forecast the hour or day of another great business boom.

"We always have come through depressions in the past. The morale of the people has been low, but adherence to the principles of our pioneering forefathers will restore confidence and bring real recovery."

In his long and notable career here, Mr. Edson was showered with honors. Some of them he refused. In 1901, he declined the post of Commissioner of the District of Columbia. But in the same year he accepted the chairmanship of the summer outing committee for children. This was characteristic of Mr. Edson, who will be remembered as one of the city's foremost philanthropists.

Aid at Inaugurations.

He began serving on inaugural committees back in 1889, when Benjamin Harrison rode in a victoria from the Capitol to the White House. And he continued serving on such committees until the second inauguration of Woodrow Wilson, by which time Presidents had exchanged the horse-drawn victoria for the motor limousine.

In 1892 Mr. Edson was chairman of a citizens' committee that entertained the first reunion of the Grand Army of the Republic in Washington. Thereafter he helped welcome home the veterans of the Spanish-American and World wars.

Mr. Edson, in his own biographical listed only a fraction of the many offices he held in his long span.

He had been treasurer of the National Geographic Society for 34 years, and Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the society, recalled last night that during his service Mr. Edson had see nthe organization grow from a struggling group of 2,500 to membership of more than 1,000,000.

Holy Comforter Parish To Hold Fete July 22

Priests and laymen of Holy Comforter Parish will participate in the Holy Comforter Church's "Golden Chance" carnival, which will be held July 22 on the campus of the parochial school, Fifteenth and East Capitol streets.

A parade will precede the carnival. Floats and bands will feature the procession. Capt. H. S. Bishop, jr., assistant engineering commissioner of the District, will be among the speakers.

Shadows Over Austria.

A tragic automobile accident has thrown Austria into a state of agitation. The sorrow occasioned by the crash in which Chancellor Schuschnigg was injured and his wife was killed is not, of course, the real cause of this tension. Behind the black banners draped over Vienna the populace sees the probability of another struggle for power that may carry repercussions throughout Europe.

Suggestions that the steering gear of Chancellor Schuschnigg's car was tampered with by his political enemies have not been substantiated. Probably they are a figment of nervous imaginations. Whether true or false, however, they indicate the jittery atmosphere prevailing in Austria. One theory is to the effect that Dr. Schuschnigg feared foul play of an entirely different nature, and was traveling at a high rate of speed to outwit his enemies. In any circumstances it is evident that the powder barrel of Europe is again smoldering.

Repeal of the anti-Hapsburg laws, thus preparing the way for an early enthronement of young Archduke Otto at Vienna, has aroused strong opposition within Austria as well as among the nations of the Little Entente. The sudden move by which Prince von Starhemberg, vice chancellor and leader of the Heimwehr forces, was placed temporarily in charge of the government is indicative of the dissatisfaction in high official circles. The Heimwehr is vigorously opposed to the early return of the Hapsburgs to power. Chancellor Schuschnigg is the leader of the legitimist movement. Even if these opposing forces are able to avoid an open breach at present, the constant danger of a showdown on this issue may keep Europe in a state of ominous expectancy.

The fact that Prince von Starhemberg was in Italy when he was placed temporarily in charge of the government may also be significant. Mussolini's influence in Vienna has long been recognized. Being eager to avoid a crisis on Italy's northern borders while he is engaged in a conquest in Ethiopia, he may be expected to oppose any immediate restoration of the Hapsburg dynasty. With the Italian army in Africa, an outbreak of hostilities among the divided fragments of the former Austro-Hungarian Empire would leave Mussolini in a most embarrassing position.

The Bar Association Report.

Where drama ended and morbidity began in exciting public interest in the Hauptmann trial has never been accurately defined. It is generally agreed, however, that the avidity with which the public snatched for sensational reports of the proceedings was a sad commentary on the attitudes of people presumably civilized. Worse than that, the fact that the court was either unable or unwilling to maintain order at the hearings indicated an ominous disaffection from the dignity on which the country's court system is predicated.

It is reassuring, then, that at last the American Bar Association has taken the trial under consideration. A report delivered at its convention in Los Angeles again calls attention to the fact that the conduct of a trial as a public show caused spectators to undervalue the life of the criminal in their eagerness for more and more thrills. Anxious to guard against repetitions of such procedure, the reporting committee recommends a conference between representatives of the bar and press to devise means of arranging full but dignified publicity of trials in the future.

The Post, as one member of the national press, welcomes the suggestion most heartily. The halls of justice should always be open, but when the public mobs its way in to the point where dignity and impartiality are threatened it is high time that some restraint be ordered.

Jefferson Island.

When the President and his chief advisers, along with congressional leaders, returned from their week-end sojourn on Jefferson Island virtually all of the political observers in Washington attempted to uncover the momentous decisions presumably formulated at this exclusive retreat. But after all the prying has been done the one thing certain is that members of the party lolled in the sun, drank long, cool glasses of beer, and otherwise amused themselves by fishing and crabbing. And of the latter sport it does not appear that the President was the victim.

Baffled by these unanimous accounts of what happened on Jefferson Island, the observers seem to have given it up as an insignificant jamboree. A group of politicians, they say, went out with the President and a good time was had by all. Already the spotlight has been turned to more important issues.

It should be obvious, however, that the significance of the Jefferson Island gathering does not lie in what was said, but in how many backs were slapped, how many jokes were told and in how much ice was cracked, both in glasses and in congressional attitudes. When the President goes out to win converts he is too astute to attempt preaching or even quietly to argue the point. Old-time stories, hilarity and comradeship have long since proved more effective. The real significance of Jefferson Island may come to light in the inevitable tussles in which Congress will engage before adjournment.

Are We Going Forward?

Looking backward over the record of the past year, it appears that no substantial improvement in general business activity has occurred, despite frequent statements to the contrary. Indeed, if statistics of employment are accepted as a measure of relative prosperity the country is not as well off today as it was a year ago. The May index of factory employment compiled by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics is slightly below the level of May, 1934, standing at 81.2 per cent of the 1923-25 average. Furthermore, according to estimates of the Alexander Hamilton Institute, there was an increase of over 400,000 in the number of unemployed in May as compared with a year ago, bringing the total to the high figure of 12,838,000 persons.

Along with the recession in employment, a decline in the Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production is also worthy of note. That index stood at 85 per cent of the 1923-25 level in May—one point lower than in the same month of the preceding year and five points below the January index. Of course, conflicting trends have been in evidence, making it difficult at times to interpret the significance of comprehensive indices. Moreover, hopes of improvement based on current developments distract attention from the rather discouraging record of past achievements. In the latter part of June, for example, increased orders for various types of heavy machinery and equipment were reported and there was a pick-up in steel and gains in retail trade.

Such sporadic and uncertain developments, however, arouse no hopes of a business revival broad enough to absorb any large proportion of the millions of idle workers. According to Col. Leonard Ayres, the most interesting and important of the problems involved in this relatively static condition of business "is that of the failure of the combination of great accumulated shortages of goods and great accumulated surpluses of capital to stimulate new business activity." Creation of new businesses and expansion of existing ones are unquestionably needed to provide work and wages in private employment for persons on Government relief rolls. Present methods of putting men to work at made tasks merely postpone the inevitable day of reckoning, when a halt to Government spending must be called.

Until existing obstacles are removed it would be a sad mistake to permit ourselves to be buoyed up by false optimism regarding the prospects for business improvement. It is not necessary, however, to take a defeatist attitude or to assume that profitable openings for idle workers no longer exist. The steady improvement which is occurring in employment conditions in highly industrialized countries like Great Britain refutes such pessimistic conclusions. It is still possible for the United States to remove such obstacles as the spending program, which creates nervousness among investors and borrowers, and to terminate legislative assaults upon business.

We have had about two years in which to learn the fallacies of the theory that recovery can be assured by raising prices and spending public money lavishly. If present policies are not reversed, we shall probably be no better off when the $4,000,000,000 work relief fund is exhausted than we are at present. When the public credit will no longer stand fresh burdens for relief purposes, a constructive solution of the unemployment problem will have to be found. Why delay until necessity forces action?

The Russian Trade Pact.

The trade agreement which the State Department has concluded with Russia appears to be relatively unimportant so far as its immediate effect upon our export trade is concerned. Among the most important of the concessions made by this country will be a cut in the duty on imported manganese—a reduction conditional upon Brazil's ratification of the agreement which we recently made with her. As Russia is currently buying goods at a rate about equal to that which she promises to maintain, our gains are not substantial. Furthermore, $30,000,000 is a small sum compared with the figures mentioned when negotiations with Russia were first instituted, although it is more than twice the volume of Russian purchases last year.

Attempts to link the trade agreement with a debt settlement have apparently been abandoned. The only result of this effort was to increase friction, create tension between the two governments, and impair prospects for eventual revival of the fast shrinking trade between Russia and this country. It is also worth noting that mutual concessions have been obtained without any attempt to stimulate sales to Russia by long-term credit grants. However, by permitting Russian goods to enter this market more freely, additional resources will be available to the Soviet government for meeting payments.

Russia would no doubt be greatly interested in importations of capital goods on a large scale for plant expansion. That, however, could only be made possible under present conditions through extension of long-term credits to Russia or purchasing here of Russian government bonds in considerable volume. Such transactions are not in sight at the moment.

It has also to be kept in mind that there is a fundamental difference between trading with Russia and other countries due to the fact that the Russian government itself is in control of actual trading operations. Our Government, on the other hand, only determines the conditions under which import trade may be carried on.

50,000 Death Traps.

Grave by grave, the automobile accident rate rises. Fatalities continue at a rate almost equaling that of 1934. Regulations, surveys, safety campaigns apparently are of little avail. On Sunday three persons were killed and five hurt on the Baltimore boulevard; on Friday, three cars smashed together on the George Washington Memorial highway, and so the endless story goes on. Can nothing be done?

Of course, no single measure will solve the problem completely. The causes of accidents are many and various. But at least one device has yet to be tried in the District. Except for the more or less cursory examinations given automobiles when they are first licensed in the District, little effort is made to insure the safe condition of mechanical equipment. If there is any doubt as to the need for systematic mechanical inspection it will be dissipated by the findings of the local branch of the American Automobile Association that 75,000 cars operated in the Capital today are over five and a half years old; 62,000 are over six and a half years old, and 50,000 are more than seven and a half years old. Strategic parts of many of these machines must be worn out if they are not obsolete. Each defective steering gear, headlight or set of brakes represents a potential accident and possible death.

A bill designed to clear the roads of such public hazards by requiring periodic inspection of motor vehicle equipment is now before Congress. It should receive unanimous public support. Under this measure the District would supervise the examinations, thereby preventing inspections by commercial interests as a means of promoting repair business.

It is occasionally argued that only a small proportion of automobiles involved in accidents are shown to have had defective equipment. But statistical records show that in Pennsylvania, for instance, out of 1,339,000 cars examined in one year, 68 per cent had defective lights and 26 per cent defective brakes. The aggregate finding in seven other States show that 54.5 per cent of the automobiles examined have inadequate lights, while 34.9 per cent have ineffective brakes.

Death lurks in obsolete and run-down mechanical equipment. It can be and should be eliminated through semiannual or even more frequent compulsory inspections.

Even Butlers Are Human.

It is seldom that anyone owes his livelihood to self-effacement. But there is one type of worker who depends on that very quality for his ability to hold a job. And that is the one to which the butler belongs. Paradoxically, the less conspicuous his services are, the better chance he stands of making himself indispensable. His other outstanding qualification is a good memory.

Notwithstanding their genius for remaining inconspicuous, a few butlers have nevertheless been brought into the limelight by authors and playwrights who apparently thought "the forgotten man" should have his innings. There was the famous and admirable Crichton of Sir James Barrie's fancy, and Jeeves, whom Wodehouse created to fit his own idea of what the ideal butler should be like, defining him as a "gentleman's personal gentleman."

Oddly enough, in the past week, two butlers have leaped into headlines. Both had gained reputations for being "the perfect butler" though this would seem a good example of damning by faint praise in the case of one who heard himself described in court as "the perfect butler, when he behaved himself." The other came much nearer Wodehouse's definition. He had served, until his death this month, for 16 years at St. John's College, Oxford. And though his first interest was rightly service to others, he found time to write several novels, over 100 poems, and to begin an ambitious philosophical work. His spare moments were obviously much better employed than those of the first butler, who used his evenings off to relieve guests of jewels and other valuables.

However, since comparisons are generally conceded to be odious, any moralistic note detected here is unintentional. This is neither a brief for the dons' man nor an attempt to discredit the gentleman's Raffles. It is simply an expression of relief to find that butlers are human after all. That does make it somehow easier to view one at close range without gaping in awe. And now that we understand butlers are human, the thing to do is to make butlers understand it.

A bacteriologist says a germ can live more than a year on a dollar bill. No doubt. A germ is a conservative and economical little fellow. He doesn't wear clothes, smoke cigars, bet on horse races, play bridge, buy motor cars, join the Elks, play golf or try to keep up with the Joneses.

For Selective Education.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The very large number of programs to offer education to youth and adults in wholesale lots cause us to ask if we are offering the kind of education our youth require and if we require the degree of scholarship necessary for success.

I have in mind a boy who thought that by attaining an honor roll average he could take five subjects the next semester, but when that possibility was withdrawn he lapsed back into a "C" average. My premise is that anything higher than a high school education should be given only to those who have manifested pronounced ability along the lines they wish to continue their studies. If the requirement were higher our youth would work harder to meet these higher standards and thus become better men and women. I fear that having lower standards to persuade many to take the courses produces a very much lower average for the whole and tends to produce mediocrity.

We hope that in the new youth education program of the Federal recovery program that the entrance requirement will be very high and that only the best qualified will be admitted. And we also hope that a very intense effort will be made to determine the direction of one's abilities before admitting him to any course. The examination should be prepared by a Federal educational bureau.

Appreciation.

To The Editor of The Post—Sir:

May I express to you my deep appreciation of an editorial which appeared in The Post of July 3, entitled, "The Election of Mrs. Doyle." No one could realize more than I how very, very generous the writer of this editorial was to me, but I'm sure that his very generosity will be an inspiration during the year ahead.

I assure you I shall try to do my best at all times for the school system of Washington.

Fainting Clerks.

To The Editor of The Post—Sir:

Won't you please help a number of your subscribers in a big office by writing an editorial or article about perfumes, deadly sickening scent, that permeate the atmosphere and cause some of us almost to faint. Several of the girls actually suffer from nausea. How selfish it is for one person to impose her heavy scent upon those with whom she works!

No Bonus Promises.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

"Veteran's" letter in The Post of July 11 complains of treatment received by the veterans from President Roosevelt.

Well, he can't say that Mr. Roosevelt promised them any special legislation. In one of his campaign speeches in October, 1932, he made direct reference to the matter in words to this effect: "There can be no bonus (or adjusted compensation payment) until the budget is balanced." In none of his speeches that I heard did he ever hint at favoring veterans above any other class of distressed Americans, so if he did get the veteran vote, as the writer avers, those votes were cast under no rash promises by Mr. Roosevelt.

The term "balanced budget" should have told the story, for surely every thinking person must have known that our national expenditures (in the prevailing quagmire of world depression, plus indifferent Government since 1921) must become greater before they were less.

No, I am no propagandist. I am a member of a profession uninfluenced by politics.

Tree Needed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am wondering what pressure could be brought to bear toward securing the planting of an additional tree behind the stage of our National Sylvan Theater in the Monument Grounds.

I am one of the thousands of persons who is taking great joy in the series of very fine performances which are being given there this summer under the able direction of Miss Bess Davis Schreiner, of the Community Center Department.

I have noticed that there is a very bad "hole" in the backdrop of trees and shrubbery behind the stage which could easily be obviated by planting another tree on the left side. This would serve to present a solid green background and prevent the lights from the park from shining through and destroying the illusion necessary to any stage performance.

The National Sylvan Theater is one of the world's finest outdoor theaters which is more than adequately serving the recreational and artistic needs of the public and is equally deserving of the interest of our public officials toward making any necessary improvements.

A Correction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Because of a typographical error in my letter which appeared in your paper of July 13, I find that the meaning was confused. The sentence in question should have read: Is it practical to say that the grower is without knowledge of soil value and at the same time accuse him of over-producing any crop?

Permit me also to observe that in scanning the names of law-respecting citizens who appealed to the highest court in the land in an effort to evade a Boston tea party we find those who have risen from the smallest farmer and others who in the days of reasonable prices maintained among the tenants benefits and privileges that could not be approached by the various agencies of any government.

A Filipino View Of Independence

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is a pleasure to observe that since President Roosevelt certified the constitution for the new Philippine Commonwealth, the Filipinos in general feel happier and more hopeful. Doubtless it is because they know they are about to realize their dream to be free and independent. They know that very soon, if the United States Congress will not change matters to pluck up their hopes, they will face the full responsibilities of a free, democratic form of government which they have established through the kind guidance and tutelage of the American people. They also understand that such responsibilities require not only the full application of their native talents and strength but their unity, harmony and co-operation so as to build, protect and maintain their orderly national life.

But, as a humble yet sanguine Filipino, who is not attuned to the caprice of politics and less concerned to the thunder of political voices, I feel that we Filipinos have other essential things to consider before we should be granted our complete and absolute freedom. First, we should strengthen our trade relations with the United States. To cut off, or cause to be cut off, this deep-rooted commercial reciprocity with Uncle Sam will mean an undesirable shock to our national existence. It will mark the debacle of Philippine economic progress, while it will also weaken all American trade relations with the Orient. Today, under the Aegis of a reciprocal free trade, over 70 per cent of the exports of the Philippines go to the United States. Let this outflow of produce be curtailed by heavy tariffs and we Filipinos will have a big problem to solve.

Besides the sustenance of our economic life, we must not overlook the necessity of our national defense, which will mean millions of dollars from our treasury as well as the sacrifice and adequate training that is necessary to keep it. At present we are wholly dependent upon the armed forces of the United States for our security. If Uncle Sam unwisely steps out without his assurance of guardianship, it is as clear as a sunshiny day, which needs neither a poet nor a philosopher to visualize, that the other nations of the world may congratulate us Filipinos, and we return their greetings mildly, while they point their fingers to the Philippines and say that, in the words of former Governor Generals Leonard Wood and W. Cameron Forbes in their report to the Secretary of War in 1921, we are still "a prey to any powerful nation coveting their rich soil and potential commercial advantages."

When I write these things I do not mean to be unpatriotic and hesitating to support the great cause for which the Philippines stand. I highly desire my country to be free and independent, when it really means our economic, social, political, national and spiritual security. I pray for this liberty, for after all it is true that the cry for freedom is only a divine right, but the means of keeping it afterward presents a different problem. The Filipinos in general should comprehend this and see to it that our politicians, who are authorized to run our government, lead us to the right direction.

Meanwhile, during the next decade, we should keep faith, friendship and confidence with the good, intellectual and humanitarian American people who, when all terms and relations have been agreed upon for the benefit and progress of both peoples, will willingly grant us our most desired liberty.

Harlem Theocracy

By Ralph E. Renaud.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

SPIRITUAL descendants of Plato and Sir Thomas Moore are making quite a racket in the world just now as they always do when the times are out of joint. It is then that wishful thinking and sloppy sentimentality drive out the hard, old common-sense gods of the Copybook Maxims, whom Kipling alone seems to worship. They range all the way from Upton Sinclair, with his Utopian Epic, to a roustabout demagogue like Huey Long, with his Share-the-Wealth plan where every man is a king as, for example, in Louisiana. They embrace Dr. Townsend who really wants to make everybody happy and thinks it can be done by fiat, and they seem to be getting powerful support in an administration which is not averse to stealing their stuff. They have now been joined by Father Divine, the Black Beauty of Harlem.

Father Divine doesn't waste time by fooling around with concessions to democracy. He isn't concerned with the forms of Fascism or Communism, which are more or less popular at present. No, indeed, he takes the shortest possible cut. Father Divine has decreed a Theocracy, with himself as god. Not even Huey Long, or—oh, well, not even Huey Long has had the nerve to do that—yet. But it is a bright idea if you can command the following.

• • • •

Father Divine commands the following. The following takes care of him and he takes care of the commands. Reports differ as to the extent of his following, but all agree that it is growing. Some say he has only 3,000 disciples and 3 limousines. Others place the figure at 10,000. But whatever it is in round numbers they are all, white and black, fanatical nuts.

Of course, in the beginning this Theocracy has to be put over by votes. Last Sunday Father Divine held a Grand Registration Rally in one of his several "heavens" and brought the faithful together as a first step in establishing Righteous Government on Earth Among Men. The general idea is to cudgel the devil out of politics and leave Father Divine holding the scepter, not in any vice-regal sense, either. Anyway, the meeting was just as hysterical as ever.

The upshot of it was that the faithful decided to go down to Municipal Building and register. The vanguard showed up early in the week and immediately precipitated what is known as an impasse. They all demanded to be registered under their divine names and the city officials refused to register them under what they called assumed names. The budding voters for Righteous Government on Earth Among Men, confronted by the unrighteous, refused to budge from their position and appeared bewildered when they were told to seek a court and have their names changed to those which appeared on the registration blanks.

• • • •

On the other hand, the officials also seemed somewhat bewildered by the names which they were expected to inscribe in the voting lists. The first sheaf included Joy Praise, Happy Smiles, Sterner Love, New Life, Truth Delight, Sympathetic Heart, Cherubim Chorine, Rebecca at the Well, Apostle Paul, Happy Sweet, Heavenly Light, Sainto of Saints, Holy Lamb, Blessed Virgin and Smiling Peter. Perhaps the officials considered the awkwardness of challenging names like that, with the possible exception of Cherubim Chorine. But they said the whole thing looked ridiculous, at least, in the rough and tumble of politics, and pointed to the fact that in the Catholic orders Brother Joseph has to register as James Murphy, or whatever his legal name happens to be.

Exasperated clerks who tried to break down the insistence of the applicants by asking "What was your father's name?" got the disconcerting reply, "Father Divine." Finally somebody hit on the happy idea of asking "What was your daddy's name?" This merely evoked the mysterious answer: "We have no more connection with motal names."

Father Divine, asked what he was going to do about the matter, was likewise quite mysterious. "There are many things to be revealed," said the rotund divinity. "I say the clerks will change their minds. They will have a different attitude. How that will be accomplished will be better revealed than told."

So Righteous Government on Earth Among Men will not perish, after all.

Petersburg Losses.

From the Atlanta Constitution.

No carnage in any of Napoleon's battles was comparable to that in the assault made by Union armies on June 18, 1864, against the Confederate defenses at Petersburg, Va. One regiment alone, the First Maine heavy artillery, lost 635 men out of 900 in 7 mniutes. Such slaughter had never been paralleled in any war, ancient or modern.

The death rate from bayonets in hand-to-hand fighting at Petersburg was higher than from bombs, gas or artillery in the World War!

A Queer People.

Our American neighbors have the world beaten for paradoxes. They collect income tax from gangsters whose crimes they can not suppress. They try to collect duty on smuggled liquor which they could not keep out of their country—and perhaps did not want to. And they invite Jack Dempsey to speak to them on motherhood.

The Initiation

THE best information that one can get out of the Jefferson Island crab-feast is that it had no more importance than the initiation into the ranks of politicians of Messrs. Ickes, Hopkins and Tugwell. Harold and Harry publicly avowed their allegiance some time ago and while Rex has said nothing the understanding is that he has come to have just as much appreciation of the boys as either Harold and Harry. Anyway, they all are looked upon now as full-fledged members of the gang and not as intruders as heretofore.

Of course, they were not put through any such shenannigans as the youngsters taken into the college fraternities, such as being required to roll a baby carriage down F street, but it is believed to have gone pretty hard with Harold and Rex nevertheless. Harry, the mixer, is said to have fitted right in. Nothing the fellows did that he wasn't in for with plenty of vigor and vim.

As a matter of fact, one of the guests said he had never had any worry about Harry, that he had always known Harry was adaptable and could get along with any crowd.

• • • •

It is a safe bet he was the envy of Harold. How Harry, who had once held the politicians in just as much abhorrence as he could, now be mixing so easily with them was something Harold undoubtedly could not understand. Gathering up the loose bits of information on the party, the impression is that he was handicapped considerably in his effort to get around among the crowd because of his awe at the ease with which Harry did it. Why, there were times when you would have thought Harry was a former Congressman, so enthusiastically did he shake hands and back-slap and tell jokes. Honestly, Chip Roberts, the Administration jokester, was down there, but there are those who say he was not a bit better than Harry, if as good.

Frequently, Harold would be standing off by himself and his sponsors would have to come and drag him into the group, but the belief is that every time he would be looking back at Harry, taking his eyes from him as reluctantly as a tiny tot turns from a stick of candy. The way Harry got along simply captivated him. The truth is that Harry has been coming more and more to be Harold's mentor. They were both idealists together with an equal contempt for politicians. But to Harold's dismay, Harry suddenly announced he understood the boys and certainly appreciated their importance in the scheme of things. Then some time later Harold said he, too, understood the boys, that as a matter of fact a man who was not a politician could not be a good government administrator.

The boys certainly did put them through, however, notwithstanding they didn't make them roll a baby carriage. What they did was to give them just about as full a dose of politics as they could possibly stand. They even had Arthur Mullen and Bruce Kramer down there to give them a whole shower of politics right in their face. Both Arthur and Bruce are delightful fellows, but you can imagine what a punishment they were to Harold, particularly, because only a few months ago he had such a sensitive and idealistic soul.

Harold's greatest difficulty was understanding the political terms in which the boys talked. Not understanding them and having to strain his ears to catch every word, naturally he couldn't be himself. He would laugh at the wrong time, make the wrong response until there was some suggestion that Harold might be deaf. But he isn't. It was just the words the boys used, words Harold had really never heard before. It must have worried him, too, that Harry picked them up so quickly. Why, Harry talked back and forth just as freely as if he had studied political language in school. Some of his pronunciation was not up to snuff, of course, but he could easily understand everything that was said.

• • • •

The thing that floored Rex was the number of Senators who had been to college and who could quote from Bartlett's just as well as he. Even Arthur and Bruce, it turned out, have degrees. It made Rex realize for the first time that when Mr. Roosevelt spoke at Yale about having brains in the government he might have been thinking about some of the Senators or maybe Arthur and Bruce.

Everybody came away with a better understanding of one another. And Harry, Harold and Rex are now full-fledged Democrats.

An American Academy

Immortal Forty's Ceremonies In Paris Prompt French To Speculate On Personnel Of Similar Institution If One Were Established In The United States.

By Andre Vulliet.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

WITH more intellectual brains collected under their 40 foreheads probably than in any other assembly in the world, two score venerable French "immortals" and hundreds of high representatives from all over the world recently solemnly celebrated the 300th anniversary of the French Academy, founded in 1635 to carry through the centuries the undying values of French civilization.

Attired in their traditional green uniforms, with small symbolic swords dangling at their sides, the 40 picked "immortals," whose names supposedly will defy oblivion, stood in the lofty Salle des Cariatides at the Louvre Palace, in Paris, as a picturesque yet stirring image of the past. In that majestic hall, which witnessed so many poignant changes in the French history, they represented the permanency of the efforts made toward a purer and clearer French language and, more generally, toward man's intellectual progress.

In extolling the French Academy, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University and delegate of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, said in substance:

"In this presence and at this celebration, one asks why it is that man's intellectual life and aspiration, as expressed in literature, in the fine arts and in science, has reached, and early reached, the great heights which history records, while his progress in all that relates to government and to those problems which arise from human association in society has been so slow, so devious and so unsatisfactory . . . why is this so?"

• • • •

LIKE many institutions that have outlived political storms, the French Academy started quite modestly. It is rather curious, indeed, that the first secretary-general of that body of immortals, one certain Valentin Conrart, should now be totally unknown. So are the names of practically all those who sat with him in the first 40 academical armchairs.

Rich and independent, with a bony face and a long nose, immortal Conrart was described by Boileau (another French "immortal," but a real one) as "a famous academician who has never written." But Conrart valued, above all, the society of brainy people, around the year 1629, friends and writers began to fall in the habit of meeting at his window-paneled, Flemish-like house, so conveniently located in the heart of Paris.

Smoking and drinking, the group would probably have kept on for years, indulging in literary chats and critical discussions, had not Cardinal de Richelieu, France's real ruler under King Louis XIII, decided to put his official stamp on Valentni Conrart's private reunions. This was in 1635.

• • • •

THE French Academy was founded. The task of its 40 members was to "safeguard" the French language, and to become a sort of "government of the letters." To this end, they had to publish a dictionary and a grammar and keep both up to date. Somehow, however, it took them 60 years to put the finishing touch to the first edition of their dictionary and another 10 years before the grammar could be ready. The second reprint of the grammar, completely revised, came out 225 years later, in 1930.

As to the dictionary, there were two editions in the course of the last century, in 1835 and 1878, and none during this one. This evident lack of productivity energy caused Emile Faguet, an eminent French critic and writer, to say that "the academy is a famous salon where distinguished old men complacently look at themselves before dying."

Growing richer and richer with legacies and bequests, the French Academy inevitably started distributing prizes. The first one was for eloquence but little by little all forms of human merits were rewarded, including "virtue"!

• • • •

THE "parrots," as the 40 Academicians are often called ironically, because of their green uniforms, are all equals. They have no president. Whenever one of their "armchairs" is made empty by death they elect a new member by secret ballot. They have done so uninterruptedly for three centuries, except for a few years during the French Revolution, when the Academy was disbanded as antidemocratic. Napoleon reorganized it in its present form.

Of course, many elections seem to have been rather unfair. Moliere, for instance, now regarded as the French equivalent for Shakespeare, never was "immortal" in the academical sense. Neither were Pascal, the greatest French philosopher; Balzac, the nineteenth century's most powerful novelist, Musset, Beaudelaire and Verlaine rated among the greatest French poets.

It may be of interest to note that Andre Maurois, whose books have been consistently successful in the United States, has yet to be admitted to sit on an academic level with such writers as Louis Bertrand, Andre Chevrillon, Andre Chaumeix or Pierre de la Gorce, whose works are little short of unknown in America. In recent weeks Paul Claudel, the former French Ambassador to Washington and noted poet, was refused the title of academician, as was Alphonse Daudet in years gone by.

• • • •

EVER since its inception, the Academy's membership requirements were enlarged to include "protectors of the arts and letters" and great men in every walk of life.

At a time when classes and privileges were so strictly drawn, the academy thus appears as the first democratic institution in France. It was the first attempt at putting on the same footing writers, great only by their talent but of humble origin, and noblemen, statesmen, lawyers and prelates. In that sort of official "salon," a spiritual community was established which was profitable to all.

Even today, the presence among its members of three men of war (Marshals Petain and Franchet d'Esperey, Gen. Weygand), two ambassadors (Maurice Paleologue and Jules Cambon), two scientists Henri Picard and Duc de Broglie), one great lawyer (Henri Robert) one philosopher (Henri Bergson), and one bishop (Mgr. Baudrillart) is a clear indication that the Academy is still what it was meant to be: the expression of a French society whose dominant characteristic and contribution to civilization has always been—and still is—intellectualism.

• • • •

WHY not, for the fun of it, transplant the same ideal on the American plan and try, with The Post readers, to compose an American Academy meant to represent the highest values of the American civilization?

Eugene O'Neil, Sinclair Lewis, Elmer Rice, Theodore Dreiser, Booth Tarkington, Sherwood Anderson, Thornton Wilder, William Lyon Phelps, James Truslow Adams, Arthur Hemingway, Walter Lippman and a few other writers should be among those included.

Gen. Pershing, no doubt, would represent the art of war and, as to religion, we might elect Bishop Manning and Archbishop Curley. There must also be some great religious figures in the West or the Middle West. Writing from Paris, we leave it up to you to find them.

Considering the all-important part played by the Supreme Court in shaping the course of American life, it seems that Chief Justice Hughes, with at least two other members of the Supreme Court, should become "immortals" right away. But who are the six justices to be left out?

Unversities and colleges certainly are one of the highest forms of American civilization. So, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler has a right place in our list. Add another or two names and that will be enough for education.

Now, what about those men, whose activities have become an integral part of the American civilization and whose energy has done more to make the United States known all over the world than many a writer. We mean businessmen and great industrialists. It seems there could be no real "American" Academy without Henry Ford, J. P. Morgan, Owen D. Young, without such millionaire benefactors as John D. Rockefeller, jr., or Andrew Mellon, without such independent lawyers as George W. Wickersham, William D. Guthrie or Judge Seabury.

• • • •

WITH due consideration for one of the most valuable American contributions to modern civilization, Frank Lloyd Wright, of Wisconsin, regarded by many as the spiritual father of modern architecture, should be included. So may be Paul Cret, who built the Folger Library, and William H. Corbett, one of the Radio City architects. There are many others, no doubt, but who is the American architect most representative of the present trend of American architecture?

Prof. Harold C. Urey, of Columbia, 1934 Nobel Prize winner for physics, and Prof. Robert A. Millikan, philosopher and astronomer of Mount Wilson fame, would add the scientific zest to our American Academy.

And, of course, Col. Lindbergh, elected by unanimous consent, would be the most respected representative of that typical American quality—the enterprising spirit.

How is that for an American Academy? At least, this is how we see it from Paris.

London, July 15.—Many Britons began to offer their services as volunteers in the Ethiopian army today as Great Britain's peace efforts in the controversy were given another push.

The government is working with France hoping the two may find some road to settlement of the dispute which could be presented at the meeting of the League of Nations Council on the subject about July 25.

While the government has held up permission of arms firms to ship munitions to Addis Ababa, it is unable to prevent British citizens from enlisting in the Emperor's army.

A rush of applicants have sent their names to the Ethiopian Legation here. These offers are "much appreciated," the minister said, but pending further instructions from Emperor Haille Selassie he is not taking active steps to enlist volunteers.

Both Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, and Lieut. Col. David John Colville, secretary for overseas trade, dodged a barrage of questions in the House of Commons today on the question of arms exports to Ethiopia.

Hoare said he had not arrived at a decision on licenses in the matter but expected to make an announcement "shortly."

Judge to Annul Ties Of Ryan and Countess

New York, July 15 (AP).—After conferring with attorneys for both sides Supreme Court Justice Salvatore Cotillo announced today that he would grant an annulment of the marriage of Clendenin J. Ryan, jr., to the former Countess Marie-Ann von Wurmbrand Stuppach, of Vienna.

The action will be in accordance with the recommendation of Referee Ralph Fay, who took testimony in the case behind locked doors. Ryan accused the countess of entering a conspiracy to obtain part of the $9,000,000 trust fund left to him by his grandfather, the late Thomas Fortune Ryan. Ryan and the countess were married in February, 1934, when she was 19 years old.

Sweet Swan Of Avon

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

IT IS my hope that I shall see every one of Shakespeare's 37 plays before I die. Yesterday I got one point nearer the goal, for we went to his "home town," Stratford-on-Avon, and there saw for the first time in my life on any stage "All's Well That Ends Well."

This makes my thirty-first Shakespearean play, so I have only six left; and if any of my readers hear of any performances—amateur or professional—of "Two Gentlemen of Verona," "Richard II," "Timon of Athens," "King Henry VI," Part 1, Part 2, Part 3—I shall be very glad to hear about them.

• • • •

I went to Stratford with little hope of an interesting performance; I went rather from a sense of duty, expecting to see a literary curiosity; for some of Shakespeare's plays can be appallingly dull on the stage. But "All's Well" was so admirably produced and acted, and the tempo was so well maintained, that my attention was held from first to last. And while it is certainly a minor play, it had plenty of theatrical effects.

We took lunch at the Shakespeare Hotel, where our pleasure in the whole expedition was greatly enhanced by the appearance of six American college students now resident at Oxford, some from Yale, some from Princeton.

Even if Shakespeare had never lived at Stratford, the village would be well worth a visit. The river is unspeakably beautiful, and the green countryside a perfect setting for the stream. Shakespeare's friend Ben Johnson called him "Sweet Swan of Avon!" and immediately after the perforcance, as we came into the open air, we saw a swan majestically moving down the river. He had a self-conscious air.

The Shakespeare Theater Company gives eight performances every week (Wednesday and Saturday matinees), from April 15 to September 14. The excellent group of players is under the direction of Mr. B. Iden Payne.

While the external aspect of the building is not particularly attractive, the theater inside is all that could be desired.

Every American who visits England between April and the middle of September should not fail to see one or more of these Shakespearean performances at Stratford.

The plays given this year are "Antony and Cleopatra," "Merchant of Venice," "As You Like It," "Merry Wives of Windsor," "All's Well That Ends Well," "King Henry IV," Part 1, "The Tempest"—surely a good bill of fare.

The journey from his native town to London and back again in Shakespeare's lifetime must have been something of an undertaking, traveling on horseback. It is more than 100 miles from London to Stratford.

Rural Retail Sales 38 Pct. Above 1934

By the Associated Press.

Increased sales of general merchandise in small towns and rural areas last month were reported yesterday by the Commerce Department.

Based upon figures supplied by mail-order houses and chain stores, the report showed that June sales in dollar volume were 38 per cent above those in June, 1934, and 51 per cent above those for June, 1933.

Average daily sales in June were reported 7.5 per cent above those in May, although there ordinarily is little change.

Total sales for the first six months of 1935 were 22.5 per cent greater than for the corresponding period of 1934.

Giant Petition For U.S. to Help Ethiopia Starts

10 Million Signatures Is Goal of Peace Group in New York.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 15.—The distribution of 500,000 peace petitions, to which 10,000,000 signatures are expected to be attached, was started today by the Committee for Ethiopia for the purpose of petitioning President Roosevelt's intervention in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute under the articles of the Kellogg-Briand peace pact.

While the committee was launching its campaign for public support, the war crisis across the sea found Harlem rumbling to schemes for "mobilization" of its man-power in defense of "Africa for Africans."

An opportunity for Harlem's sympathizers to pledge life, money and honor in the service of Emperor Haile Selassie was arranged by the Pan-African Reconstruction Association.

The association, headquartered in New York's colony of 400,000 Negroes, announced plans for a "gigantic rally" to sign up volunteers but set no date. A preliminary meeting today, however, drew a few score persons who extolled Ethiopian liberty.

Samuel Daniels, founder and president of the association, represented an Ethiopian diplomat in Washington as prepared to accept and welcome recruits with a "guarantee" of transportation to Ethiopia. The guarantor was not identified.

An executive group, representing all races, creeds and degrees of national prominence, heads the committee. Included are:

George W. Wickersham, the Rev. P. K. Emmons, Presbyterian Church, of Scranton, Pa.; the Rev. R. H. Hutchison, general secretary of the United Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh; the Rev. John Clark Williams, president of the Ohio Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, Arlington, Ohio; the Rev. Frank G. Coffin, formey moderator, general council, Congregational and Christian churches, Columbus, Ohio; the Rev. Elmer W. Cole, Christian Church, South Bend, Ind.

In the petitions to President Roosevelt, the committee urges that Italy be reminded of her obligations under the Kellogg-Briand pact, that Italy be told war on Ethiopia would arouse public condemnation in the United States, and that the United States express willingness to serve as arbiter in any dispute.

Black Rust Fears Advance Grains

Chicago, July 15 (AP). — Steep jumps of wheat prices, including 5 cents a bushel at Kansas City, resulted largely today from abrupt broadening of black rust damage into Canada.

Word of greatly enlarged wheat crop injury from black rust in South Dakota, too, attracted special attention, and so likewise did spreading of the plague into southwest Michigan. Emphasizing sudden enhancement of wheat values were trade advices that the harvest movement of the domestic winter crop in the Southwest had about reached the season's peak, and that the 1935 merchantable yield in Kansas might not be in excess of 50,000,000 bushels.

Wheat in Chicago closed nervous, 1⅛@2⅛ above Saturday's finish. September, 82¾@82⅞; corn, ¾@1¾ up; September, 75½@75⅝; oats, ⅝@1 cent advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 10 cents.

Bond Offers This Week Top $400,000,000

Investment Firms Face Test in Finding Purchasers.

New York, July 15 (AP).—With flotation of Government and corporate securities during the first six months of this year the highest since 1931, investment firms in the current week face what commentators believe will be a test of their ability to handle more than $400,000,000 in securities scheduled for public offering.

Ten companies have completed the 20-day waiting period after registration of their obligations with the Securities and Exchange Commission and are at liberty to offer in the next five business days a total of $302,550,000 in bonds and stocks.

Including new securities planned for offering by municipal governments and the $53,000,000 issue of the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston, which already has passed through the 20-day period, the total is calculated above $400,000,000.

$2,000,000,000 in Six Months.

For the first six months of this year there were about $2,020,000,000 in new securities offered to the public, the largest total since the first six months of 1931.

For many months there had been what investment quarters termed a log jam in the capital market. No corporations issued securities, mainly for fear of liability under the securities act of 1933. But when a large packing company ventured successfully into the field after the SEC modified its registration form, there was a rush of others to duplicate the performance.

In an analysis of the issues, the Fitch Publishing Co. shows 76 per cent of all securities were offered to raise funds to retire other issues, mostly those bearing a higher rate of interest, a movement which has saved the Federal Government many millions in the last few months. The remainder of the money raised was termed new capital.

Mostly Refunding.

Corporations for the most part retired old issues bearing a higher rate of interest, but the bulk of municipal issues was for new funds which Fitch stated reflected "largely the continuing heavy expenditures for relief and local public works."

The outstanding problem in investment circles, it has been pointed out, is the price at which the securities this week will be offered to the public. Although there is more money available for investment than ever before in the history of American banking, some quarters believe lenders might refuse to participate should the prices of the new securities be too high.

The proposed offering of preferred stock by Commercial Investment Trust is being watched closely by bankers and investment firms to determine the public response.

June Tax Revenue Set at $327,197

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., July 15.—The June revenue from the State's 1 per cent gross receipt and automobile titling taxes reached $327,197.12 today, when returns from 18,970 retailers had been tabulated.

The gross receipt tax has brought in $286,772.89, with about 4,000 more returns to be tabulated. The June automobile tax was $40,424.23.

Officials said they thought the total June return would exceed the previous months.

Only two applications for a refund of taxes paid on merchandise sold prior to April 1 have been received at the collection office. Under the Court of Appeals decision the collection of the tax on payments made for merchandise sold prior to the date the law became effective was disapproved.

"Mama," whispered little Willie as the great conductor took his place in the orchestra pit and the famous soprano began her aria, "what's the man shaking the stick at her for?"

"Shut up!" Mama explained. "That's his baton. He isn't shaking it at her."

"Then what's she hollerin' for?"

That, we are sad to report, is little Willie's reaction to good music. The case of his sister is even worse. She just loves to prattle about how much she adores good music, but when she has an opportunity to listen to a great symphony she stays home and tunes the radio to Cab Calloway's band. She thinks that arpeggio is an island in the Pacific and that Chaikovski was a Russian general. You see, little Willie and his sister have not read the excellent articles by Ray C. B. Brown in The Washington Post; and, therefore, are not en rapport with things musical. But there is hope for them even now, and we are starting a subscription to The Post for them in order that they may learn the intellectual pleasure to be derived from listening to classical music.

Mr. Brown is one of America's best known music critics, and his authoritative, intelligent, sensitive articles are required reading for music lovers. Washington is becoming more and more music conscious, and The Post is proud of the part Mr. Brown has played in explaining the works of great composers to new listeners. For two years he was managing editor of Musical America and his writings are studied closely by students. In his "Postlude" column, discussing the programs presented by symphony orchestras, choral groups and others, he strikes a new note in criticism.

Like his good friend, Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, the "tune detector," Mr. Brown can listen to Tin Pan Alley's latest song hit and tell you instantly the symphony from which the theme was stolen, and, if you question him closely, he might remember the older work from which the symphony composer borrowed a few bars!

In The Sunday Post you'll find an entire page devoted to music, and the leading article, always written by Mr. Brown, will give you a deeper, more sympathetic understanding of all things musical. Nowadays, when Stravinski's "Firebird" suite is discussed at the dinner table along with the New Deal and Europe's war scare, you'll find Ray C. B. Brown's brilliant articles of great help in convincing your hostess that you, too, can recognize Bloch's "Schelomo" and that you can discuss Hindemith with the best of them. If you are a lover of good music you'll appreciate his clear, authentic criticisms; if you are just learning to listen to the great symphonies you'll demand his help. You'll find it in

Clipper Plane Is Being Tested For Miami Hop

Trials Held at Baltimore for 20-Hour, Non-Stop Return Trip.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 15.—Preparing for a 20-hour non-stop round trip flight between here and Miami, the Flying Clipper No. 7 was taken aloft today on a maneuver test.

The huge 46-passenger craft, destined for use in Pan-American Airways' transpacific service, has made a series of flights during the last week, most of them under full load conditions. The craft weighs 51,000 pounds with maximum load.

"We have adjusted the aileron control until she can be guided horizontally with a finger-tip," said L. C. Milburn, vice president and general manager of the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft Co., builders of the Clipper and two sistership. "We are making similar adjustments on the rudder control."

The 2,000-mile flight to Miami and return will be made after other tests this week. Milburn said full load climbing tests will be made later this week. Oxygen equipment will be carried on these flights.

The Clipper has a wingspread of 130 feet; its length overall is 90 feet. The fuel tanks will carry 4,000 gallons of gasoline. There will be sleeping accommodations aboard the plane for 30 passengers.

Walther Leaguers Warned on Changes

St. Louis, July 15 (AP).—A deeper interest in governmental affairs to prevent destruction of "your home and your church" was urged upon delegates to the International Walther League convention here today.

Walter E. Helmke, president of the league, who today was nominated for re-election, told the 3,000 visitors that: "If any changes are to be made in our economic and governmental life, the citizens should make the decisions."

"The youth of today desires only the opportunity to accomplish the goal of a happy, free and successful life," he said. "It is characteristic of youth to dream and plan individual achievement and success. The red-blooded American youth today has no desire to share the wealth, he only wants an opportunity to earn the wealth of this great Nation."

Labor Split Blocks Rail Pension Action

Senate Hearing Recessed Until Next Week.

By the Associated Press.

Unable to reconcile a breach between two labor groups over terms of a new railway pension bill, a Senate Interstate Commerce subcommittee yesterday recessed its hearing until next week.

The National Railway Pension Employes Association sought an amendment to the bill to provide that when an unemployed railroad worker is reemployed, his prior service will be computed in determining his pension.

Edwin A. Krauthoff, counsel for the Railway Labor Executives Association, representing 19 major labor groups, feared inclusion of such a provision would bring on even more bitter railroad opposition to the bill than already has been expressed.

Further time also was granted the railroads to present opposition to the bill, which seeks to replace the pension act held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

Prince Georges Jury to Weigh 3-Death Crash

Coroner Sets July 24 for Inquiry; Two Held as Witnesses.

A Prince Georges County coroner's jury will be convened July 24, to inquire into the deaths of three persons, who were killed Sunday in a triple auto crash near Beltsville, Md.

Acting Coroner George S. Phillips said he would summon the jury to meet at the Metropolitan Building at Hyattsville.

Those killed in the accident were Royal C. Remick, 61, wealthy steel man, who lived at the Congressional Country Club; Charles R. Davis, 28, of 1101 Fifteenth street northwest, and J. J. Curran, 57, of Daniels Park, Md.

John C. Bunch, of Terre Haute, Ind., alleged driver of one of the cars, and his son, Troy Bunch, who were held at the Hyattsville lockup as material witnesses for the State, were released on bond. The State's case is being investigated by Sergt. A. D. Markley and Corp. C. W. Cubbage.

Mrs. Mary Bunch, wife of the alleged driver and one of the five injured, was released yesterday from Sibley Hospital. She was treated for a lacerated scalp.

The condition of Sergt. Harold R. Hacker of the Marine Corps was reported at Naval Hospital to be critical. He suffered a fractured skull. Conditions of three others injured, Mrs. Thelma Davis, 30, wife of one of the men killed; Miss Mary G. Budd, 29, of 3151 Mount Pleasant street northwest, and Clarence Dorsey, a Marine, were said to be improved.

State Policeman C. W. Pedrick and County Policeman Howard Slater said the auto driven by Dorsey skidded on wet asphalt and crashed into a car operated by Curran. The car driven by John C. Bunch is said to have plowed into these two.

Long Names Marguerite Clark On State Film Censorship Body

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, July 15.—Marguerite Clark, favorite of both the stage and screen until her retirement 15 years ago, has been named a member of the motion picture censorship board of Louisiana, Senator Huey P. Long announced today.

Besides Marguerite Clark—now Mrs. Harry P. Williams—A. W. Newlin, a former newspaperman, and an unnamed lawyer are members of the board. Its duties, Long said, are to bring better movies to New Orleans and to return the vaudeville circuits to this city.

The former Marguerite Clark, he said, was "not too eager to take the position, but her husband was perfectly willing for her to take it if she wanted to."

She was the original "Baby Mine." She played Polly in "Mr. Pickwick" with De Wolf Hopper and toured all over the United States with his company. She toured as Peter Pan and in "Babes in Toyland," and she played the title roles in "Merely Mary Ann" and "Baby Dolls on Broadway."

She was born in Cincinnati and was first married to Lieut H. Palmerson-Williams. Her first stage appearance was in Baltimore in 1899, under the management of Milton Aborn, and she reached Broadway as an understudy in 1900.

In 1914 she went into the movies and was a favorite with devotees of the old silent screen. Among her successes there were "Seven Sisters" and "The Prince and the Pauper."

Senator Long made his announcement in a meeting with the New Orleans motion picture exhibitors and distributors. He told them they had been "running nickel shows" and had "got to improve."

Socialists Attempt To Prevent Schism

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 15.—The national executive committee of the Socialist Party tonight formulated a compromise in an effort to compose the bitter differences between right and left factions in New York City and State and to avert a major schism.

The program, in the main, was that prepared by Mayor Daniel Hoan, of Milwaukee, and three party leaders from outside New York.

Designated as a pact of peace, its adoption was gained with anything but harmony. Predictions were voiced on both sides that the differences will be fought over until the 1936 convention.

The "old guard" won most major points in the Hoan compromise except that the city party machine, controlled by the right group, must immediately accept into membership qualified members of the Young People's Socialist League.

League members are made eligible by the national constitution but the New York City party machine had rejected them as members.

TWENTY FIVE YEARS Ago

"IN July 1910, we founded the American Oil Company. It was a very small beginning, and there was no excitement except in the hearts of the few of us who were handling the affairs of the new-born company.

"Our equipment was very simple—nowadays it would be called primitive. Our policy was just as simple, but far more important. For a good policy endures, while equipment wears out.

"That policy was—and still is—to offer honest values, honestly described, to market distinctive and better products, to constantly work towards their improvement, to sell them at fair prices, and to render efficient service.

"That policy developed AMOCO-GAS, the original special motor fuel. It created AMOCO Motor Oil—Orange AMERICAN GAS—and the long line of other quality petroleum products we sell.

"In line with this policy we recently improved AMOCO-GAS. And very soon now—we'll announce an improvement in another of our products.

"Twenty-five years have passed, and 25 years is a pretty good age in a business as young as the petroleum business. This company has grown to be a major factor in the industry. We have large refineries, and an extensive marketing system from Maine to Florida and inland. But what we value most of all is our splendid organization and the fine public good-will towards us.

"We sincerely thank all of our associates, dealers, other customers and friends whose support and approval have made this 25th Anniversary possible."

Week-Ender Spirit Marks Beach Ferry

Many Capital Society Folk on Connecting Link to Resorts.

Rehoboth Continues to Be Magnet for D. C. Sojourners.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The Monday morning ferries from Matapeak to Annapolis bring an interesting group of Washingtonians back to hard work from pleasant week-ends on the Eastern Shore of Maryland and from Delaware, where several popular seaside resorts are gay places from Friday until Monday. On the early morning ferries are those unfortunates who must be at their desks by 9 o'clock, but the later boats are a continuation of the gay week-ends as the homegoers chat about the preceeding days.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis Smith entertained a distinguished and interesting group in their cottage at Rehoboth Beach, over the week-end when their guests included Justice and Mrs. R. O. Luhring, who had spent the previous week with them; Justice and Mrs. James Proctor and Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas Q. Ashburn. The house party broke up early yesterday, for Justice Luhring had to return to town for his summer session on the bench; Justice and Mrs. Proctor to make last-minute preparations for their trip to Europe on which they will embark tomorrow, sailing from Baltimore to spend several weeks traveling on the Continent, and Gen. and Mrs. Ashburn to complete their plans for a trip to Mexico City they will start soon.

Smiths' Cocktail Party.

On Saturday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Britton Brown entertained at a cocktail party for the Smiths' party when there were numerous other guests. Mrs. Brown left Rehoboth Sunday night to entrain for New York, where she spends the first days of each week in her smart Madison avenue shop, and Mr. Brown came to Washington for a few days.

The Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, who are now established in their cottage at the beach, lead a simple life while on vacation, and the minister particularly dislikes any break in his self-imposed regime of early to bed and early to rise, and no parties. On Saturday, when informed that he was to attend a cocktail party for an "old-fashioned" with a group of friends, he protested by mildly saying "I never did like 'old-timers' anyway."

The Air Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Champsaur, with their two small children, have leased a cottage at Bethany Beach, Del., some 12 miles below Rehoboth, for the summer, and had as their week-end guests the Naval Attache of the Embassy and Mme. Sable. Also at the beach for the week-end were the Second Secretary of the French Embassy, M. Claude de Boisanger, and the Attache of Embassy, M. Charles Saint, who was among those who gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Emmons Smith on Saturday evening for an informal party.

McLean Children at Beach.

Young "Jock" McLean, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, with his brother, Ned, jr., and his young sister, Evalyn, motored to Rehoboth for the week-end and spent much of their time in the company of Miss Valerie Prochnik, as did Mr. John de Sibour.

Mrs. Fred Essary, who is there for several weeks with daughters, Miss Annabel and Mill Helen, had as her guests the Chief of the Eastern European Division of the State Department, Mr. Robert F. Kelley; Mrs. Henry Shepherd and Mr. George H. Williams, and Mr. and Mrs. John E. Parker had with them Mr. Frank Gwathmey.

Dr. and Mrs. William D. Tewksbury and their daughter, Miss Helen Tewksbury, spent the week-end at the Henlopen Hotel, and though the doctor returned to Washington yesterday, his family will remain for several weeks longer, and he plans to join them for week-ends.

Miss Lyla Townsend, daughter of Senator John Townsend, jr., of Delaware, had with her Miss Katherine Harrison, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Pat Harrison.

Mrs. J. W. Davidge In New England

Daughter Leaves Today to Join Her at Lancaster.

Mrs. John W. Davidge has gone to her summer home at Mount Prospect, Lancaster, N. H., where she will spend the remainder of the season. Mr. Davidge will join her there later in the summer.

Their daughter, Miss Martha Davidge, who was a debutante of last season, will leave today to join her mother in their country home. Miss Dadvidge spent several weeks abroad in the late spring, when she was the guest of Miss Christine Long, daughter of the United States Ambassador to Italy and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, and a sister debutante, at the embassy in Rome.

Mr. and Mrs. Hooker Here on Wedding Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Wolcott Hooker are at the Shoreham for a short visit while on their wedding trip. They will make their home in New York City.

Mrs. Hooker is the former Miss Grace Garden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rhiel Garden. Her marriage took place Saturday at the home of her parents in Roanoke, Va. Mr. Hooker is well known in New York society.

Members of Capital Society Enjoy Beach at Popular Resort

Below—Mrs. Marshall Orme Exnicios, with her two small daughters, Carol and Joan, find that "castles in the sand" is a grand summer game. But these castles seem to have staged a collapse as young Carol smiles for the photographer. Mr. and Mrs. Exnicios have taken a cottage at Rehoboth Beach, Del., for the season, and the former joins his family there every week-end. Left—Miss Valerie Prochnik, daughter of the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, wears a gay Breton costume as she and Mr. John de Sibour relax on the beach at Rehoboth, Del., where Miss Prochnik and her parents are summering.

Posts of Legion To Aid Hospital By Horse Show

"Gay Nineties Class" Will Be Feature of Montgomery Event.

Many popular members of Virginia's society set are expected to participate in the charity horse and pony show the Montgomery County Council of American Legion Posts will stage in Rock Creek Park, at Chevy Chase, Md., Saturday to raise funds for the Montgomery County Hospital.

Invitations have been mailed to virtually all of the Old Dominion State's exhibitors and many have indicated they will come on for the Legion show, proceeds of which will be used to establish an orthopedic clinic at the hospital or for the hospitalization of veterans' widows and orphans.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney, of Upperville, mistress of famed Llangollen Farms, will judge the hunter classes on the 22-event program, which will begin at 9:30 a. m. and continue throughout the day with only a brief respite for luncheon.

The outstanding show horses of Washington, Maryland and Virginia are expected to take part, for events for all types of horses have been arranged, including a Gay Nineties Class. In this event the exhibitors will ride or drive their horses to old-fashioned rigs and they will be attired in costumes of the 1890-1900 period.

This class has proved extremely popular in Virginia and New York circles, but has never before been presented in the Capital area. It is expected that nearly two score will take part. Silver trophies for first and second places will be offered in this, as well as the other classes. More than $500 in servicable silver awards are at stake in the show.

The show grounds are located on the East-West highway between Sixteenth street and Connecticut avenue. Two uniformed bands will play throughout the day, while a spectacular drill by a Maryland service unit is planned.

Dining Place At Alexandria Cool, Colorful

Old House Takes You Back to Colonial Days; Twin-Decked Beds Again.

By Dudley Harmon.

Pinch-hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

A BEAUTIFUL, high-ceilinged old house in Alexandria, with a flower-filled garden sloping away in the distance behind—this is our latest find in delightful places to dine. The house itself is almost 200 years old. You feel as though you were turning the calendar back into colonial days the minute you walk over the threshold. The windows and the high ceilings are airy and cool, after the baking sun on the street outside. Gay-colored prints scattered about the walls add to a quaint atmosphere. Those who prefer al fresco eating will find the garden one of the most beautiful in Alexandria, which is saying a good deal, in this town of delightful old gardens. Small tables, covered with gay, polka-dotted umbrellas, are scattered here and there about the lawn. And the food! The flaky, delicious fried chicken, the fresh, cool tomatoes, and the feathery, piping hot biscuits, will make you want to come here again and again. The prices are unexpectedly low; luncheon is from 55 to 75 cents, and dinner from 85 cents to $1.

Double-Decked Bed.

A FEW days ago, we called attention to a new double-decked bed which a Seventh street furniture store is featuring. Having received several telephone calls from persons who want to know more about this article, we are going to describe it again for the benefit of those who might have missed the item. This bed should be an ideal addition to any home where space is an important consideration. It is made of two single beds, placed one on top of the other. Made of wood, the bed is painted brown, and finished with a handsome dull finish. A four-poster, it is designed along early American lines, with a simplicity which is most attractive. One climbs aboard the top deck by means of a handy wooden ladder, painted and finished just like the bed. Once tucked in on top, you can adjust around the edge a small wooden panel, to make sure you do not tumble out. An added advantage is that the bed can be taken apart very easily and made into twin beds. The entire outfit costs only $64. If you have ever wondered where to put your house guests, this article is certainly worth your while to see. It should also be useful for roommates who wish to save space in a small apartment.

Brush to Invigorate Skin.

SOMEWHAT to our surprise, we learned the other day that nothing does the skin more good than a good, stiff brushing. It stimulates the circulation tremendously, and brings a becoming pink into the palest cheeks. A London cosmetics house has recently put out a very attractive box containing one of these brushes and a cake of milk facial soap as well. The soap is a special product of some of the secrets of their laboratories, and is an unusual blend of various oils and chemicals. It contains all the qualities which make a milk facial so beneficial to your skin, and is guaranteed to cleanse the pores thoroughly. You wet the brush, rub on the soap, and use as a washrag. The price is $2.50.

Ideal Gift for Beau.

A CONNECTICUT AVENUE store has the ideal present for your father's or your best beau's birthday. It is called a "lapel watch," and, as its name implies, is attached to the lapel by means of a leather button. The watch itself is tucked neatly into the breast pocket. No hot, heavy wrist watch, with one of these lapel watches. They're very new, very handsome, and sell for only $7.50.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: After reading the letters in your column telling what many people think of present-day radio programs, I wish to say that so far as I am concerned, the programs seem so trashy I can not remember when I have turned on our radio.

In times past, when we sat down of evenings to read, we would turn on the radio to the best music we could find. Inevitably, in a little while, something else would come on that we didn't care to listen to, and I had to be jumping up and down every little while to get something decent.

• • • •

I am indeed glad that someone took the initiative in complaining about this obnoxious radio advertising. It seems a shame that quiet, home-loving people can't get some enjoyment out of the radio. I hope something can be done to improve the situation.

• • • •

I was particularly impressed by the letter from "N. B. B." printed July 12, which complained that the Sabbath is desecrated by advertising broadcasts. It certainly seems to me that on Sundays the radio should prohibit any broadcast which doesn't contribute to spiritual uplift. Persons who don't go to church are particularly hungry for this kind of thing over the radio.

READER.

DEAR READER: Thank you for your spirited contribution to this discussion of modern radio programs. That the subject is one of lively interest to readers seems proven by the fact that for two weeks, letters dealing with the subject continue to come in on nearly every mail. M. H.

Would Aid Radio.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Both as housewife and early morning radio listener-in, I have been interested in your column's discussion of radio broadcasts. I have been told by representatives of two local broadcasting stations that I have an exceptionally fine "radio voice." I have broadcast, gratuitously, for two organizations.

• • • •

If I could get in touch with the gentleman who has arranged radio programs, whom you cited on July 1 (in answering the letter of "Fed-Up") as being willing to listen to any constructive ideas for improving radio entertainment, I would be glad to assist him should he need my services.

• • • •

I enjoy your column because it covers such a wide field. It puts one to thinking about so many subjects and gives one an idea of the various things one's fellow man is interested in; and his reactions to others' comments.

• • • •

Thanking you for any consideration and assuring you I would enjoy any part I might play in giving radio and its listeners-in a helping hand, I am, yours truly,

C. D.

DEAR C. D.: I have given your name and address to the man whom I referred to in my column of July 1, as one who "has worked with radio for years, compiling and presenting programs." If opportunity develops for utilizing your talents, I'm sure he will call upon you.

Suits and Coats at Style Clinic Show Marked Boyish Trends

More Pleated and Flared Skirts for Long Strides Give 'Movement' to Fall Models; Simplicity in Lines Yield to Riot in Colors.

By Frances Mangum,

Post Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Youth is the victory cry for next season's styles, but it is youth far removed from the awkward flapper influence predominant a few years ago. These fall clothes are designed for action. They have a breeziness about them and an ever-so-youthful little boy look.

This revelation of fall styles was made at the Amos Parrish fashion clinic at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, which was attended by stylists and buyers from throughout the Nation. Every type of garment that women will be wearing within the next six months was exhibited.

The trend toward boyishness in women's clothes was accented in model after model.

Peter Pan collars, double-breasted effects, shirtwaist touches, trim two-piece suits, sturdy materials, military fastenings, hats that verge on fedoras, all these tell over and over again of just how strongly the boyish influence will show on fall fashions.

The double quick tempo of the age is reflected this season by the "movement" in fashions. There are more pleated skirts that make for long, fast, strides, more flaring skirts to swing out in the breeze, more draped bodices for freedom of arm action, more swagger coats—in fact, more grace, freedom and comfort in clothes.

Sport Clothes Emphasized.

Great stress will be laid this fall on sports clothes. This fact was brought out at the clinic by the attractive variety of sports models shown and the unusual interest manifested in them. There were swagger and boyish overcoats with wide revers; double-breasted reefers; loose, comfortable, belted coats; the ever-popular seven-eighths length swagger coat with jacket and skirt; full-back swagger coat, three-fourths length, with matching or contrasting skirt; plain two-piece sports dresses, and many button-up-the-fronts with Peter Pan collars or wide revers. And, of course, the sweater, skirt and leather jacket had its place in the picture for wide-awake Miss Out-of-Doors.

The gossip about drapes having an important niche in the fashion world this fall was corroborated.

Among the models offered for proof was a Grecian gown of heavy, white sheer, trimmed with gold and luxuriantly draped. The line of the long side drape, hanging loosely over the arm or worn completely over the head, sari style, was carried out also in the soft folds of the bodice and the mass of folds falling cascade-like down the center front of the skirt.

Have an Oriental Touch.

This dress, while typically classical, had also a bit of the Oriental about it—the head drape and the skirt treatment. It is these two motifs which will go into full swing during fall; 1935—skirts sweeping away from hips in lavish folds and drapes, drapes around the shoulders, over the head, hanging straight to the floor.

While Grecian and Oriental influences predominate in these drapery styles, there is also a trace of the 1880 drape simplified 100 per cent. The heavy, outrageous folds which grandmother wore have subsided this season and are noted only in the interesting gathers found over the hipline.

The very trend for simplicity which has hewn those 1880 hip folds down to a few sparsely and gracefully arranged gathers is a decided keynote to fall fashions in general. Suits, coats, dresses and hats, evening wraps, bags and gloves are all "naturalized," and made completely wearable through the influence of an ever important style factor—American simplicity.

A Season for Color.

Simplicity of line and silhouette have yielded, however, to a riot of color. This is a season for color. Mad combinations of color such as you see in the gala dress of south European peasants; the deep glowing colors of the Renaissance, and the fascinating purplish-toned colors of the Persians and the Hindus.

Among the combinations of Renaissance colors which strike a high fashion note are titian red and green, blue, red rust and blue green, bright brown and pink rust and yellow green; light red and dark gray, bright beige and dark blue; or dark blue and light red. Hindustan and Persia offer their wealth of color through fuchsia and mauve blue and pink with a touch of gold; dark brown, gold and light green, dark purple and mauve pink, wine red and pink. Pink with a soft, almost lavendar undertone is definitely accented for fall. Dark purple and mauve red, used together, offer a just reason for the popularity which has been theirs for thousands of years among the Orientals.

This will be a season when dress trimming will be of contrasting colors. Collars will be bright, belts and sashes will bring vivid shades to one's costumes. Hats and scarfs along with other accessories will brighten up suits and coats.

Often one single fabric will provide its own treasury of colors, tweedy mixtures, for instance, bursting forth in dark brown, green, pink rust, beige and gray, or velvets, rusty red on one side, light blue on the other, offering real Oriental magnificence in color.

Preserve Fruit Now to Avert Winter Regret

Thoughts of Thanksgiving Turkey Without Jam Should Spur Effort.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE LEADING culinary questions of the moment seem to hinge upon the do's and don'ts of preserving and pickling. If you haven't the gumption to get into the kitchen for a few hours these hot summer days, spur yourself on with a few vivid thoughts. Try to visualize a winter without spiced crab apples for the first turkey about Thanksgiving time, or the lost elegance of roast stuffed veal minus the familiar tang of spiced peaches, or a winter menu that boasts a a glorious stuffed baked fish with no sweet cucumber pickles to accompany it.

Just a word of warning, however, before you start. Don't take this business of preserving at too long a stride. If you buy everything in sight at one time, you will find that to get everything preserved before it spoils is going to be too much of a strain, and your results will show that you have been in too great a hurry. Take everything slowly and easily, do a little bit at a time.

Sweet Pickled Peaches.

½ peck of peaches
2 pounds brown sugar
1 pint vinegar
1 ounce stick cinnamon
Cloves

Boil sugar, vinegar and cinnamon 20 minutes. Dip peaches quickly in hot water, then rub off the fur with a clean towel. Stick each peach with four cloves. Put into sirup and cook until soft, using half the peaches at a time. Sweet pickled pears may be made by following the same recipe.

Seal the peaches and sirup in sterile, air-tight jars.

Sweet Crabapple Pickle.

3 pounds crabapples
2 cups cider vinegar
1 cup sugar
1½ teaspoons cloves
1½ teaspoons allspice berries
1½ teaspoons black pepper
1½ teaspoons ginger

Wipe crabapples, remove stems and steam until soft. Tie spices in muslin bag, put in preserving kettle, add vinegar, sugar and apples, bring to boiling point gradually and simmer 20 minutes.

Seal in sterile, air-tight jars.

Green Sliced Cucumber Pickles (Uncooked.)

2 dozen 6-inch cucumbers
2 quarts boiling water
1½ cups salt
1 cup olive oil
¾ pound white mustard seed
¼ pound black bustard seed
6 cups vinegar

Wipe and slice cucumbers thinly without paring. Cover with a brine made of water and salt and let stand over night.

Drain thoroughly and put in a crock. Mix remaining ingredients and pour over cucumbers. Stir frequently.

Ripe Cucumber Pickle.

Cut the cucumbers in half lengthwise. Cover with alum water, allowing two teaspoons powdered alum to each quart of water. Heat gradually to boiling point, then let stand in warm place two hours. Remove from alum water, and chill in ice water. Make a sirup by boiling 5 minutes 2 pounds of sugar, 1 pint vinegar, with 2 tablespoons each of whole cloves and stick cinnamon tied in a piece of muslin. Add cucumbers and cook 10 minutes. Remove cucumbers to a stone jar and pour over the sirup. Scald sirup 3 successive mornings and return to cucumbers.

Mind Functions Best After Light Lunch, Scientist Discovers

If you would do your best work in the afternoon don't eat a heavy lunch. This old wives' maxim has now been substantiated by scientific experiments conducted by Dr. Donald A. Laird, of Colgate University.

Dr. Laird recruited eight healthy young men, all used to eat their noon meals in his laboratory for four weeks. Half the meals were the heavy, farm type, half dairy lunches such as cereal, milk gelatine custard or fresh fruit dessert. After lunch Dr. Laird tested his subjects by various mental tests requiring memory, accuracy, quick thinking.

Accuracy, speed and attention all were found to slacken on the days the heavy lunches were eaten.

The cause for this, says Dr. Laird, is brain anemia. A hearty meal shifts the blood supply from the surface of the body and from the extremities (including the head) to the stomach.

Rest and Diet Excel Medicine As Reducer of Blood Pressure

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

IT is high time that we consider some plain facts about blood pressure and its significance when the level is consistently higher than normal. It must be understood that our emotions influence not only the rate of the heart beat but the pressure of the blood within the arteries. Every physician is familiar with the type of patient whose blood pressure at the first reading will be 160 or even higher. Relieve this individual of apprehension, retake the reading, and a level of 125 or 130 is found.

There are three factors that are primarily concerned with blood pressure: (1) hereditary disposition, (2) fatigue or overwork of the nervous system, and (3) overeating. It is exceedingly doubtful if the various toxins play an important role, although alcohol and tobacco are often blamed.

Children of parents with high blood pressure may evidence the symptom some time in the second decade of life. As a rule, these young persons will show signs of nervous irritability, although mentally they may be considerably above the average. They will often complain of cold, sweaty, tingling of hands and feet, and they are sometimes subject to attacks of nosebleed. When they reach adult life they are successful, are able to carry out large projects, and are oftimes leaders in business and professional life. They can go for days, weeks, or even months without adequate rest. Such persons, if they are careful not to gain weight when they become middle aged, will be bothered in but a minor degree with symptoms of increased blood pressure.

It is remarkable what careful management can do for these persons. Mild sedatives that are harmless will promote sleep. A new regime of rest and exercise and a restricted diet will reduce weight and add years to life.

Homes of Future Will Emphasize Children's Needs

Houses in which children can be happy will be one of the architectural developments of the future, predicts Gladys Denny Schultz, writing in Parents Magazine. A suitable home for children, she says, will contain the following:

A playroom.

A bedroom for each child, if possible.

A porch for outdoor play in bad weather.

An outdoor play space.

No danger spots, indoors or out.

Arrangements in playrooms, bedrooms and entrances for putting away clothing, wraps and playthings.

An entrance preferably on the side which gives access to the parts of the house of special interest to children without taking them through the more formal rooms.

Extension Given Nolan in Divorce

Justice Cox Allows Him to Aug. 17 to File Appeal.

Justice Joseph W. Cox, in the District Supreme Court, has signed an order extending to August 17 the time when attorneys representing William J. Nolan may file a "statement of evidence" in connection with Nolan's appeal from an order of the court awarding his wife, Mrs. Alice M. Nolan, a limited divorce, $450 a month for the maintenance of herself and their two children, and custody of the children.

In addition, the original order required Mr. Nolan to pay Mrs. Nolan's attorneys, Henry I. Quinn and Austin F. Canfield, fees of $4,000.

In his decree, Justice Cox directed that a bond of $5,000 must be posted by Mr. Nolan to supersede, with the express limitation that the award of alimony was not the order to be affected.

The appeal, which will be heard by the United States Court of Appeals, can not reach a hearing until next fall.

Chairman King, of a Senate Judiciary sub-committee, who presided Saturday at a hearing on the nominations, said yesterday he would recommend confirmation for all of those named.

Only two opposition witnesses appeared at Saturday's hearing. Both objected to reappointment of Judge Aukam. The committee regarded the complaints as trivial.

Maryland Session On Relief, Pensions In January Likely

Officials Indicate Call for Special Meeting Slated Then.

Plan Gives Time To Study Setup

Financing in Lieu of Tax on Receipts Would Be Worked Out.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 15.—Indications are that the Maryland General Assembly will meet in special session next January to consider means of financing relief and old-age pensions after the 1 per cent gross receipts tax expires, State officials who declined to be quoted, said today.

The tax was enacted into law at the 1935 session of the Legislature, but was for one year only. It expires next March 31.

Possibility of a summer special session was removed last week when the State Court of Appeals upheld the constitutionality of the act.

It was generally recognized when the 1935 session adjourned last April 1 that there would be a special session within a year because the gross receipts levy, the only means of providing State funds for relief, would expire during that time. Some of the legislators believed they would be called back to Annapolis during the fall.

Basis for New Steps.

It was pointed out today that January would be a likely month for the special session. By that time, State officials said, the State would have the benefit of almost a full year of collection of the gross receipts levy and would have a working basis on which to study future tax legislation for relief needs.

Also, the old-age pension system set up by the last Legislature will have been in operation at least three months by that time and will offer a basis for future legislation.

It was pointed out the majority of the Federal security legislation should be straightened out by January and it will be possible for Maryland to know exactly what State legislation will be needed to enable this State to participate in benefits of the Federal security program.

Time for Study.

By meeting during January, the legislators would give State tax officials two months to study any new revenue-raising plan before it would go into effect. Expiration of the gross receipts tax March 31 would give the comptroller's office February and March to make plans for any new tax set-up.

Gov. Nice has not said what date he would fix for the special session.

Man Bitten Twice, Copperhead Is Dead

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., July 15.—Although twice bitten by a copperhead snake recently, J. B. Cash, of Lowesville, asserts that he suffered no great inconvenience from the bites, but he was no little surprised when the snake died soon after striking the second time.

Cash attributes the fact that he suffered no ill effects to liberal applications of kerosene to the wounds.

Staples Advises Virginia Set Up Crime Bureau

Attorney General Declares State Is Lacking in Identification Work.

By the Associated Press.

Virginia Beach, Va., July 15.—A State bureau of criminal identification and investigation was proposed here tonight by Attorney General A. P. Staples.

"Virginia is woefully lacking in facilities for the identification of criminals," he said, speaking before the first annual convention of the Virginia Association of Trial Justices.

In urging establishment of the bureau, the attorney general asserted "there should be in Virginia a clearing house of information concerning the identification and history of all criminals convicted of crimes involving moral turpitude."

Fingerprints of these criminals should be taken and made available to all law enforcement officers at a central bureau, he continued. "This would go far," he said, "to disclose aliases and other deceptions through which many hardened criminals are enabled to procure light sentences, paroles, and even pardons, in ignorance of their history.

"While the service of such a bureau would entail some expense to the State, in my opinion it would be well worth while and would soon pay for itself in crime prevention," the trial justices were told.

Approximately 75 members of the association gathered here today for the convention, which will continue through tomorrow afternoon. Representative A. Willis Robertson, of Lexington, made the welcoming address.

Road Toll 6, State Spurs Safety Drive

First Day of Campaign Marked by Fatalities in Maryland.

Police to Intensify War on Reckless Motorists.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 15.—Six fatalities from automobile accidents marked the opening day of a State-wide safety campaign, and State police tonight were prepared to take determined steps to put a halt to reckless driving.

Three of the deaths occurred last night at Beltsville, on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard, which was wet, investigating officers said. Examination indicated the driver of the car was "at least" technically reckless.

Police have begun a survey of boulevard conditions in the neighborhood of Beltsville, it was disclosed, with a view to drawing up recommendations for more adequate warning devices at the curve.

A grade crossing nearby increases the danger of that section of roadway, observers pointed out.

In the absence of J. Purdon Wright, superintendent of the State constabulary, a police department official said the toll of dead "makes the need for caution on the road more glaringly apparent."

The official asserted Gov. Nice and Maj. Wright are "deeply concerned" by the increased number of deaths on the State's highways.

"The State police will do all they can to promote a higher degree of safety for motorists," he said. "In doing this, we are in absolute need of the co-operation of the drivers themselves."

Processing Tax On Wheat Hit In Virginia Suit

Shenandoah Milling Company Sues to Enjoin U. S. Collection.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 15.—Contending the AAA processing tax is unconstitutional as the processing of wheat does not constitute interstate commerce, the Shenandoah Milling Co. of Shenandoah City, Va., one of the largest flour mills in the South, today sought an injunction in the Federal court here to restrain Collector of Internal Revenue N. B. Early, of Richmond, from collecting the $14,379.45 in processing taxes owed by the mill for its June production of flour.

Judge John Paul, of the Western United States Court District, granted a preliminary restraining order against Collector Early pending action on a hearing to be held in the United States courtroom here next Monday, when the milling company will ask the court for a temporary injunction. The milling company deposited the $14,379.45 with the court pending the outcome of the proceedings. The sum is payable on or before July 31, and the milling company asks that the Government be restrained from the collecting of the processing tax either by levy, distraint, suit or lien on its property.

In contending that the processing tax is unconstitutional, the Shenandoah Milling Co. alleged that Congress legislated powers which are reserved to the States, that its imposition constitutes a deprivation of property without due process of law, that neither the growth of grain nor its manufacture constitutes interstate commerce, that the so-called taxes are not taxes in fact but are an illegal exaction for the benefit of a class, and that the method of computation is so vague as to be a violation of the fifth amendment.

Collection of the tax as it applies to peanuts has been attacked in the United States Court of the Eastern District of Virginia.

River Halts Peregrinations Of Two Adventurers, 7 and 9

By the Associated Press.

Easton, Md., July 15.—The desire of two Easton boys, one 7, the other 9, to see the world was cut short by an open railroad drawbridge.

Today, the boys, James Smith, 9, and Stewart Bell, 7, were back in their homes here, none the worse for their short venture into the world except for numerous minor lacerations inflicted by barnacles on the pilings of the drawbridge.

They started out on their runaway tour yesterday afternoon and got along fine until they reached the Choptank River 2 miles from here, where they found that the drawbridge was open. Not daunted, they hopped in the river and started across.

Half way over they became exhausted and clung to pilings of the bridge. Barnacles on the pilings cut them, so they shouted for help.

Ralph Millikin, a farmer who lives nearby, rescued them and took them home to their parents.

Hotel on Army Land Claims Liquor Right

By the Associated Press.

Old Point Comfort, Va., July 15.—Legal advice to the effect that the Chamberlin Hotel is not violating the present law by selling whisky was claimed today by J. Wesley Gardner, manager.

"I have not been informed of any action contemplated by local military authorities to prohibit the hotel from continuing to operate its bar," he added.

Meanwhile Gen. Tracy, commanding officer of Fort Monroe, could not be reached for a statement. A War Department ruling has placed responsibility of enforcing a new law regulating sale of liquors on military reservations on the commanding officer of the area. The Hotel Chamberlin is located on a military reservation.

Annapolis Line May Be Linked To B.&O.Again

Bondholders Weigh Plan to Run Trains Into Baltimore.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., July 15.—Operation of the old North Shore route of the Washington, Baltimore & Ohio connection is regarded as a possibility by persons familiar with history of the difficulties of the old W. B. & A., which has been in receivership several years.

If the Annapolis short line bondholders are able eventually to carry out their plans, it is said, they probably will connect the North Shore line with the B. & O. a short distance out of Baltimore and run trains into Camden Station and the Camden freight yards, thus restoring the situation as it was before the Annapolis short line was absorbed by the W. B. & A.

Freight in and out of Annapolis is what interests the railroad, experts say. If the arrangement described is realized, it is pointed out, the Baltimore & Ohio will have increased its facilities for booking freight in and out of Annapolis. The railroad also will have increased facilities for moving passengers in large numbers, as it will be possible to run cars filled with passengers from B. & O. tracks to the tracks of its connections, it is pointed out.

Final Court Action Due On W. B. A. Sale Today

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 15.—Final disposition of the properties of the Washington, Bltimore & Annapolis Electric Railroad is expected to be made at a hearing tomorrow before Judge William C. Coleman in United States District Court here.

The court also will consider the bid made on Saturday by the Pennsylvania Railroad which is willing to provide freight and passenger service between Annapolis and Fort Meade Junction for at least three years.

All bids are subject to confirmation of the court.

Wheat Farmers In Va. Due $569,560

Adjustment Payments to Follow Crop Report.

By the Associated Press.

The Farm Administration said yesterday Virginia wheat farmers will have received $569,560 in adjustment payments before the end of the summer.

Meanwhile, AAA field agents were in the State checking the wheat belt acreage and production. The first payment of 20 cents will be made as soon as the compliance reports are filed with the department and audited. In addition to the 20 cents the Virginia wheat growers at the same time will receive a second payment of 9 cents on last year's adjustment. A second payment augmenting the 20 cents, will be made later in the year.

A small deduction is to be made from the $569,560 to defray the expenses of the local associations. The AAA estimated that the deduction would amount to approximately 2.9 cents a bushel.

Bland Gains Federal Help For Growers

Eastern Shore Potato Surplus to Be Reduced by U. S. Agency.

Hopkins to Act Shortly; Warren Bill to Be Pushed.

By the Associated Press.

Representative Bland (Democrat), Virginia, of Newport News, carried a plea for help from Eastern Shore of Virginia potato farmers to President Roosevelt yesterday and later said their crop surplus would be reduced immediately by the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation.

Officials of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration said Administrator Hopkins had the matter before him, but they were unable yesterday to say how much of the shore's potato crop surplus would be bought by the Government or how much money would be available for the purpose.

Bland said he discussed the plight of the Eastern Shore farmers, who recently called a shipping strike to boost prices, and that the matter was referred to Administrator Hopkins who, within the next two days, would begin removing the surplus.

Meanwhile, Bland said additional impetus would be given the move to make the Warren potato bill, setting up for next year Federal control for the crop, a rider on the amendment bill now pending on the floor of the Senate. The amendment bill will reach a Senate vote later this week. It is possible that the Warren bill will be considered as an amendment to the bill tomorrow.

Bland said numerous telegrams, representing hundreds of potato growers, had come to him asking Federal aid.

Prices have been as low as $1.25 a barrel for potatoes on the shore this year.

Workmen have removed the granite porch, torn away the white wooden cornice that surrounded the eaves, taken out the upper part of the bay window that houses a bedroom and the dining room, and sheathed the entire structure in scaffolding. The breach in the wall caused by the removal of the top of the bay window is covered with canvas.

Bricklayers are constructing the walls of the southeast wing, opposite the Court of Appeals. It will house the office of the Governor, with a garage underneath for the executive mansion automobiles. The concrete foundations for the northeast wing, to include a conservatory, have been laid.

When complete, the two wings will be connected with the mansion proper in the manner of the colonial homes of the city. The mansard roof of the mansion will be removed and a peak roof substituted.

States Seek Agreements In Tag 'War'

Motor Officials to Attend Conference on Truck License.

Freight Movement Hampered by West Virginia Restrictions.

By the Associated Press.

Ocean City, Md., July 15.—Cessation of the truck license "war" between West Virginia and neighboring States will be sought at a meeting here tomorrow of roads officials of the States involved.

The conference was called by A. H. Bishop, president, and John E. Raine, general manager of the Automobile Trade Association of Maryland.

A new West Virginia law, effective July 1, requiring out-of-State trucks to be licensed in West Virginia, resulted in the breakdown of reciprocity agreements with Virginia and Maryland.

Ohio and Pennsylvania will also be represented at the conference.

With the crumbling of the agreements, Maryland impounded West Virginia trucks until they secured Maryland licenses. Virginia took the same steps. Several Maryland drivers were arrested in West Virginia.

Officials attending the conference will be empowered to approve any new reciprocal agreement. Among those invited to the conference are:

James B. Tierney, West Virginia, supervisor of transportation; Fred B. Lager, secretary of the West Virginia Automobile Dealers Association; John Q. Rhodes, jr., director of the division of motor vehicles for Virginia; Frank West, registrar of motor vehicles for Ohio; Herbert Baker, superintendent of transportation for Ohio; W. A. Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic for the District of Columbia; L. S. Harris, director of the motor vehicles bureau of North Carolina; William Reiter, deputy director of the motor vehicle bureau of Pennsylvania, and Walter R. Rudy, commissioner of motor vehicles for Maryland.

The movement of the Automobile Trade Association to clarify a situation that hampered movement of freight was affirmed by the truckers.

"While no longer actively identified with the truck owners' organization in Maryland, the Automobile Trade Association has among its membership most of the truck dealers and branch houses of truck manufacturers, and for this reason we are vitally interested in securing a truce," Raine said.

"Early last week, after several telephone conversations with the Governor and commissioner of motor vehicles for West Virginia, upon being informed of their willingness to sit in at the conference, we called the meeting which will be held tomorrow.

"At this meeting, which will be held in Ocean City concurrently with the convention of the automobile dealers, a plan to terminate the truck war now raging as a result of West Virginia's rescinding all reciprocal privileges to nonresident trucks will be diagnosed and adopted."

Plans for New Theater Season Hold Special Interest for the National Capital

Theater Guild Plans Notable List of Plays

To Star Ina Claire Again; Revue Cast Is Growing; Amusement Jottings.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

There are certain midsummer manifestations of new-season theatrical activity in which the National Capital should feel an especial interest.

Washington being one of the Theater Guild's subscription cities—exercising that function through the office of the American Theater Society—it should be worth knowing, for example, that the Guild's plans are well along the road to actual fulfillment, once the Labor Day holiday and other late summer distractions are definitely out of the way.

"Porgy," revitalizeed as a musical drama, with score by George Gershwin, from the stage play of Charleston's famous Fish Walk, by Du Bose Heyward, will be one of the Guild's most important early season productions in the Imperial Theater, New York.

In its own Guild Theater, the organization, probably the most opulent producing unit in the American theater, will establish Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in Will Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew," an enterprise in which this recently truant team of former Guild stars already has been seen away from the Eastern seaboard.

Miss Claire Returns.

With these two admirable projects successfully (one hopes) launched, the Guild will turn its promotional interests to the further glorification of the Capital's own Ina Claire, recently signed to a three-year contract by the Guild after a year's experimentation under other auspices.

Miss Claire's vehicle will be an item bearing the axiomatic title of "Love Is Not Simple," a comic trifle from the Hungarian pen of the prolific Ladislas Fodor.

Miss Claire was seen at the National last season in the premiere week of "Ode to Liberty," a provocative comedy of present-day social and governmental trends that elicited mild acclaim. It would be a happy circumstance if her return to the Guild's complacent fold might be signalized by some such rousing hit as she scored in the Guild's production of S. N. Behrman's sprightly comedy of "Biography."

Since Maxwell Anderson's most recent plays—"Mary of Scotland" and "Valley Forge"—provided high lights of Washington's seasons of last year and the year before, in inverse order, the outlook for the newest work affords a source of interesting speculation.

McClintic Holds Rights.

The name of the play is "Winterset," and it, too, was to have gone to the Guild, like the two earlier works already mentioned. After holding the script for some time, however, the Guild turned it over to its protege, the Group Theater which, through some breakdown or other in the negotiations, permitted it to revert to its author. The piece now is understood to be in the possession of Guthrie McClintic, who has expressed a determination to launch it after Miss Cornell's tour in "Romeo and Juliet" once is put in motion, although nothing as yet has been signed to that effect.

There is a double-barreled interest in the next probable adventure in the theater of Washington's more or less adopted daughter, Tallulah Bankhead. Clifford Odets, whose social drama, "Waiting for Lefty," recently has been the subject of much lively comment in the Capital by reason of its repeated presentations under the sponsorship of certain Representatives in the Congress of the United States, is reputedly at work on a new drama concerning a love affair between a Communist and a society girl. This sort of thing in Mr. Odets' hands probably would be just a bit pungent. He is said to be writing it with Miss Bankhead in mind.

It seems a little difficult at the moment to call to mind a more suitable star for the kind of play Mr. Odets' no doubt will turn out to be.

With the indecision characteristic of a new producing group struggling with the complexities of a program that contemplates the wedding of the altruistic and commercial theaters, the National Civic Theater Society has encountered some difficulty in making up its collective mind precisely what will be the bill in the Odeon Theater on the grounds of the National Park Seminary, at Forest Glen, Md., this week.

Frenzied phone calls and hasty bulletins to this desk on the very brink of the deadline hour for Sabbath's theater section all were to the effect that Margaret Hatfield's manuscript play, "Till Death Us Do Part," would be the bill—a fact that was celebrated with some enthusiasm in yesterday's paper.

No sooner was that irretrievably in type than later dispatches began to arrive, announcing a continuation of the run of "The Bride the Sun Shines On" through this week, "by popular demand" and "because several lodges and social organizations have arranged for benefit performances during the week."

Whether Miss Hatfield's play will be the society's next production, or whether it ever will be presented, deponent sayeth not—and this column is a notoriously poor guesser!

It Won't Be Long Now!

Announcement of the complete list of principals for the third annual, all-Washington revue, "Going Native," to be staged at Loew's Fox Theater next month, will be made this week, according to statement of Gene Ford, manager of the Fox and co-sponsor with Division Manager Carter Barron of Loew's, Inc., of the revue.

Contracts already have been signed with a majority of those selected for parts on the basis of their showing in the auditions held on the nights of July 1, 2 and 3 in the National Theater. It is expected that the complete roster will be signed within a few days, when the names of all will be made public.

Scenery is expected to begin to arrive from New York next week. At that time chorus rehearsals also will get under way with Marjorie Hartoin, ballet mistress at the Capitol Theater in New York, once more in charge.

Local Artists Help.

Two local artists will play a prominent part in designing some of the special scenic effects for "Going Native." They are Miss Jane McKenzie, 30 T street northwest, and Martin Rose, 1757 P street. These young artists have done a considerable amount of work in this city under PWA and on many of the floats displayed in the recent Shriners' parades.

In addition to one outstanding musical number, "Rhythm of the Ice," which he wrote himself, Mr. Ford now has under way several other originals which are expected to be sensational.

That should be a great battle of cute cadenzas and hot harmonics on the Variety Club's first annual showboat cruise, setting sail from the wharf of the Wilson Line steamer City of Washington Saturday midnight of this week and returning somewhere in the vicinity of 3 a. m., and the same wharf, next morning. It has been promised from the outset that two great "name" bands would be on deck to furnish music for dancing and concert specialties. General Chairman Carter Barron announced last week that one of these would be Jolly Coburn and his Rainbow Room Orchestra.

Now it comes out that the other will be Ina Ray Hutton, that dynamic young blonde, and Her Melodears, probably the most sensational distaff detonators known to the American theater.

Tickets for this aquatic jamboree are priced at $2 each and may be purchased only from members of the Variety Club. For what you will get on this cruise, that is a bargain price tag.

Today's Variety Club luncheon, incidentally, will be the last of the summer season. Arthur Godfrey, of the air waves, and Arthur de Titta, of the Fox Movietone News, will be the "Kings for a Day," and will lead the cheering for that distinguished gentleman of the Old South, Col. Harry P. Somerville, of Kaintucky and the Willud Hotel, suh, in whose wayside inn the festivities will be celebrated. It is being bruited about that one of the novelties of the occasion will be the demonstration of a new motion-picture projection machine that makes possible the showing of pictures in broad daylight with no loss of tone values or pictorial effect.

The last issue of the Film Daily's Year Book lists 14,573 motion picture titles—enough, one would think, to cover every line of human activity and every character that might be put to any dramatic use. Yet, it seems that occasionally it still is possible to think up something new under the cinema sun.

In spite of the fact that it has been stated that there remains no unsung hero who might possibly be transported to the shadowy realms of camera drama, the Warner Brothers appear to have discovered one whose prowess never before has been celebrated in celluloid.

He is the Treasury Department Agent—the bright young investigator, who has been able to send the biggest of the country's law violators to the big house after all other governmental agencies have failed.

Look At Al!

Al Capone was convicted of failure to declare his correct income tax by one of these agents and his associates and assistants and now look where Al is! His case was only one of many that were prosecuted with similar success.

He works quietly and cautiously, this new agent, matches his wits with the "best minds" of the underworld, outsmarts criminal lawyers and politicians and lands his quarry behind the bars—jail, not julep!

You will see him on the screen for the first time soon in the person of George Brent in a picture called "Special Agent," now in production in Burbank.

Or is this just another twist to the "G Men" motif?

When "To Die at Dawn, or Rescued From the Whipping Post" is presented at the Roadside Theater tonight to inaugurate a two-week run, those three revolving stages that have been so much talked about and so little used will be placed in vigorous operation. There are two and three scene changes in each of the four acts of this rousing old-time melodrama that only recently has been rescued from oblivion. Anton Hardt has directed the production and Edith I. Allen and her lusty stage crew have built six different settings for its scattered action, ranging from a scene in the depths of Mammoth Cave to a handsome drawing room in the Governor's mansion. The cast includes Harold Stepler, Gail Dennis, William Phillips, Thomas M. Cahill, Ralph Fowler, John Edwards, Lavina Merrick, Kenn Romney, Charles A. Bell and Elinor Cox Karsten.

Thanks for the Tome.

This column acknowledges with thanks a gift copy of one of the most valuable compendiums of useful information concerning the motion-picture industry that comes annually to hand—the Motion Picture Almanac for 1935-36.

This is a voluminous reference work compiled by the publishers of the Motion Picture Herald, Martin Quigley's leader in the industry's trade journal field. It is edited by Terry Ramsaye, one of the most erudite and profound students of the cinema in these United States. I suspect that I am personally indebted to Ernest A. Rovelstad, managing editor, for my copy.

The Motion Picture Almanac in its new issue consists of more than 1,200 pages of facts needed by any dramatic department, all arranged simply and conveniently for ready reference—biographies of players, studio personnels, producing companies, directors, cameramen, writers, codes, historical data, whatnot.

I can think of no more useful book to have around. So thanks again, to all and sundry.

Survival-of-the-Ages Note.

A card from L. Stoddard Taylor, former manager of the Shubert-Belasco Theater, mailed from Romany Roost, North Monmouth, Me., says in part: "Passed a funny Ford today, license plate read 'B. C.—876.' Could Henry have been in business then?"

He certainly could. I rode in that car just a day or two ago, only the guy called it a taxicab!

Man Severely Burned By Tractor Explosion

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middletown, Md., July 15.—Paul Ropp, 27, son of Henry Ropp, northeast of Middletown, was severely burned following the explosion this morning of a gasoline tractor being used to operate a threshing machine on the farm tenanted by Howard M. Eigenbrode.

The explosion occurred while young Ropp, owner of the threshing outfit, attempted to fill the tank of the tractor with gasoline while it was in operation. He was critically burned about the chest, arms, hands and thighs before the flames were extinguished by fellow workers. He was rushed to the Frederick City Hospital. The barn and other outbuildings were saved from destruction by the prompt arrival of the Middletown Volunteer Fire Company.

From the "Follies" to the Films

Like so many other youthful beauties who have preceded her over the same course, Mary Ellen Brown, whose likeness appears above, found it an easy matter to graduate from the pulchritudinous ranks of the "Follies" to the no less engaging feminine forces of the cinema. Having only recently signed a motion picture contract, Miss Brown will be seen for the first time on a local screen in "College Scandal," coming to the Earle on Friday. In this subject the campus is made the background of a murder mystery.

Charlie Chaplin promised the salesmen that he would make a picture every year, even if it took him four years to make it.

Marlene Dietrich got Josef von Sternberg to take her out. He even went for dancing at the Troc . . . And because Paramount's new flicker for Dietrich, "The Pearl Necklace," isn't ready yet, they had to pay Marlene, according to her contract, $250,000 even though she didn't make the picture . . . Paramount pictures play the Publix Theaters and "The Devil Is a Woman" did such bad business that they call it Publix Enemy Number One." . . . After much ballyhoo about "Anchors Aweigh," Warners will have to change the title, for they have learned that Metro owns the right to this monicker . . . A sign on the marquee of a theater on Hollywood boulevard reads: "George White's Scandals—The Man Who Knew Too Much."

Ida Lupino's latest romance is Tommy Beck, a contract player at Fox . . . Slickum, the colored bootblack at Metro, is toss-in a greater movie ball down on Central avenue next week, and many of the Metro players will be there . . . An interesting item to be found on many "call sheets," which lists the players working that day in various flickers—is this typewritten line: "Two bit girls."

A new book about Hollywood, and a fascinating one, is "Hollywood by Starlight," written by R. J. Minney, the co-author of "Clive of India," who came here to work on the screen play. Minney names and tells things that Hollywood resents being told . . . Lily Pons is taking dancing lessons for her flicker, "Love Song" . . . Hazel Forbes has been flying to San Francisco because she likes to hear Harry Richman sing . . . It was at a dinner party and when the hostess asked synical Oscar Levant what he wanted to drink, Oscar answered, "Milk." "That's right," said the hostess, "milk is good for you." Whereupon Dorothy Parker added: "Milk may be good for Oscar but bad for the milk."

BUSBY BERKELEY intends to open a barber shop with girl barbers . . . Jack Haley clicked so big in "The Girl Friend" at the preview that he will probably turn down the offer to return to Broadway next season in the Vinton Freedley musical and continue his flicker career which now looks very promising . . . Dolores Costello took a screen test at Paramount for a flicker titled, "The Bouncer," but it doesn't seem likely that she will get the role . . . Hollywood has a way of reuniting authors. George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly, who were a favorite pair of collaborators of Broadway hits, are now working together on a script for Irving Thalberg. And Lawrence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson, who separated several plays after "What Price Glory," worked on the scenario, "So Red the Rose."

• • • •

Lawrence Tibbett is getting ready to start work in his flicker "Metropolitan" and yarns about Tibbett are being told. One concerns the time when he was playing in "Emperor Jones" and a group of the Hall-Johnson singers were engaged to chant in the background. To achieve a better pictorial effect many of the colored singers were dabbed with black paint. One of the singers, however, objected to the paint. He declared, "don't put that black paint on me, you'll have me looking like Lawrence Tibbett." . . . The sign on a small marquee of a local theater reads briefly: "Jean Harlow—two features."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

First summer concert by the National Symphony Orchestra (Hans Kindler, conductor) at the Potomac Watergate Sunday night. Program: Overture to "Die Meistersinger" (Wagner), Symphony in D minor (Franck), "Voices of Spring" and "Perpetuum Mobile" (Johann Strauss, Jr.), "Wiegenlied" (Brahms), "1812" Overture (Chaikovski).

For those in authority who had made the plans and for the musical public who had long cherished expectations, this concert was virtually a midsummer night's dream come true. At last Washington took its place among the American cities that provide excellent musical fresco for the delectation of music lovers and the response of the serried auditors who crowded the Watergate testified to a deep appreciation.

Experience of similar outdoor concerts in the Lewisohn Stadium, the Hollywood Bowl and the Greek Theater on the campus of the University of California had left this reviewer unprepared for the peculiar gratification derived from the occasion and the site. The occasion was, of course, festive and stimulated the appropriate elation, but the site was impressive in its unique and significant character. The conjunction of the two evoked what may be called a solemn joy.

In the arrangement of his program Dr. Kindler apparently anticipated such an effect. At least, one deduces his intention from his choice of the two works constituting the first half of the program. For the festival spirit abounds in the overture to "Die Meistersinger," the prelude to a tale symbolizing the triumph of true musicianship. And the great spiritual drama of the Franck Symphony, in which the nobility of the human spirit conquers doubts and uncertainties, was never more fittingly played than on the river flowing between the national memorial to Abraham Lincoln and the home of Robert E. Lee.

There is more than a trace of self-glorification in "Die Meistersinger." Wagner had fought for his ideas and his ideals, he had encountered his Beckmesser and discomfitted him, he had won his laurels despite opposition and envy. The victory of Walther was his own, and he celebrated it in glorious tones. But the simplicity and modesty of Cesar Franck produced a masterpiece unwittingly; he spoke not of himself, but of everyman. He set forth with convincing eloquence the battle between faith and despair which wages in every mind and because faith had dominated in him, he imparts confidence to all who heed his message.

The latter half of the program was a continuation of the joyous mood of the outset, with a tender interlude provided by the lovely cradle song of Brahms. Yet what the heedful listener carried away for recollection was the admirable performance of the symphony by Dr. Kindler and his musicians.

Some problems of acoustics will have to be solved as the series of concerts progresses. For those seated near the reflecting shell there were apparent some unexpected echoes and disturbances of balance between the orchestral choirs. From the top of the water gate steps these distortions were less noticeable. They can be eliminated and one understands that careful observations were being made last night to determine what changes should be made.

Browns Trim Nats, 3 to 2, In 11th

Lary's Looping Double Scores Winning Run; Miles Plate Star.

Whitehill Beaten in Duel by Andrews; Both Are Hard Hit.

By Shirley Povich.

THE Nats were beaten yesterday by the eighth-place St. Louis Browns, a turn of events that requires an explanation. The finger of shame points directly at young Dee Miles, the rookie outfielder from Chattanooga, who reverted to minor league stuff in the eleventh inning, spoiled a clever performance for Earl Whitehill and presented the Browns with a 3-to-2 victory.

Young Miles stood out in right field apparently quite enthralled by the big league scene and neglected to bestir himself on Lyn Lary's lazy pop fly until the ball was far out of reach. A spectacular dive for it at the last moment netted him only a mouthful of grass and thus it was that the winning run scored on a gift double.

Drove in 2 Runs.

It was too bad. Miles was in a fair way toward becoming the big star of the game. He had made the hits that drove in the only two Washington runs; he had contributed a pair of catches that bordered on the sensational, and he had been the only man to steal a base. But the day was warm and ennervating and perhaps he felt in need of his eleventh-inning siesta. Anyway, that's what happened.

Ivy Paul Andrews and Whitehill were locked in a beautiful hurling duel throughout the battle played before a handful of fans. The Nats tied the score at 2 to 2 in the sixth, and with Whitehill turning the Browns back scoreless for seven straight innings, the game wore into the eleventh.

Hits were plentiful on both sides with each totaling 13, but Whitehill and Andrews were superb in the pinches, and not until Miles' misplay could either claim the advantage.

Sammy West, another former Nat, stood between Washington and victory in the sixth inning when, with the tying run across and Miles on second after h' third consecutive single and a steal, he raced far into center field to drag down Cliff Bolton's powerful hoist with an over-the-shoulder catch that was worth the price of admission. It was a screaming line drive that West caught with his face to the bleachers.

Whitehill put the winning run on base when he walked Clift at the start of the eleventh. Burnett's sacrifice and Andrews' infield out put Clift on third and then it was that the weak-hitting Lary, a Washington alumnus, wafted his fly into right field to win the ball game with the kind help of Miles.

Manush Singles.

At one point during their last turn at bat, the Nats appeared as if they would tie the score and reprieve Miles from the goat's role. Lary bobbled Bluege's grounder with one out and Pinch Hitter Heinie Manush drilled a single to center that put Bluege on third with the tying run.

But Joe Kuhel could meet the situation only with a grounder to First Baseman Burns, whose throw home

Al Bejma Is Spiked; Will Be Out for Week

Al Bejma, second baseman of the St. Louis Browns, suffered a severe spike wound on his right arm in the fourth inning at Griffith Stadium yesterday and is expected to be missing from the Browns' line-up for a week.

Bejma was hurt when he tagged out Dee Miles at second base on the latter's attempt to stretch a single to left field into a double. Miles' spikes tore a four-inch gash in the infielder's arm and he rushed to the Washington bench to receive first-aid treatment. Trainer Mike Martin, of the Nats, applied a tourniquet to stop the rapid flow of blood.

Cards Score To Cut Lead Of Giants

Champions Rout Braves, 13 to 6, to Capture 11th Straight.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, July 15.—Frankie Frisch's climbing Cardinals won their eleventh consecutive victory today by defeating the Boston Braves, 13 to 6, in the first of a four-game series and crept to within five games of the league leading New York Giants.

The Braves collected 14 safeties off the erratic hurling of Dizzy Dean, but the effective batting of his teammates enabled the Cardinal hurler to turn in his fifteenth triumph of the season—half way to his 1934 total.

Frankhouse, usually effective against the Redbirds, was pounded out of the box with two out in the for 11 hits and 10 runs and knocked third inning. The Cardinals garnered seven more hits off his replacement, Larry Benton.

Capt. Slug Durocher knocked two home runs and Joe Medwick contributed a third.

Maytag Injured, Evans Seen Choice in Western

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 15 (AP).—L. B. (Bud) Maytag, the home club favorite, announced tonight that a knee injury would prevent him from playing in the Western amateur golf tournament starting at the Broadmoor course tomorrow.

This unexpected turn left Chick Evans, of Chicago, eight-time winner of the title, as the chief veteran threat among a field of 150, most of them youngsters headed by the defending champion, Zell Eaton, Oklahoma City.

Reds Swamp Giants, 13-6, End Jinx

Schumacher Is Routed After Capturing 11 Games in Row.

Cincinnati Rallies Three Times, Collecting Total of 18 Hits.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, July 15.—Hal Schumacher's four-year-old jinx over Cincinnati and his 11-game winning streak were broken today as the Reds blasted the New York Giants' ace right-hander from the box in the seventh and then went on to defeat the league leaders, 13 to 6, for their sixth straight victory.

The triumph ended Schumacher's reign over the Reds after he had beaten them 14 times and tied them once since May 19, 1932. It also reduced the Giants' lead to five games over the Cardinals, who turned back the Braves for their eleventh successive victory.

Three times the Reds came from behind to tie the score in a hard-hitting affair, which saw Chuck Dressen's men collect a total of 18 hits, including a homer by Bill Myers, off Schumacher, Carl Hubbell and Leon Chagnon. The Giants got to three Cincinnati hurlers, Leroy Herrmann, Don Brennan and Benny Frey for 14 safe blows, with Mel Ott cracking out his twentieth homer of the season and Hank Leiber adding his fourteenth.

Homers in Succession.

Ott and Leiber hit their blows in succession in the fifth after the latter had been knocked out temporarily when he crashed into the bleacher wall in the third and then hit by a pitched ball in the fourth.

In suffering his third setback of the season as compared to 13 victories, Schumacher was hit hard from the outset. The Giants' heavy hitting kept them in front, however, until the seventh when the Reds scored six runs before Carl Hubbell could get them out. Hubbell was lifted for a pinch hitter and the Reds counted three more times in the eighth off Chagnon, with Myers hitting his homer.

Wiffy Cox Day Celebrated at Kenwood

Spencer-Hollebaugh Win Pro-Amateur Play With 64 Score.

COMBINING to turn in a best ball score of 64, 6 under par, Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam professional and Russ Holebaugh, ace amateur at Kenwood, won the pro-amateur sweepstakes yesterday in the feature engagement of the Wiffey Cox Day golf carnival at Kenwood.

The winners scorched the outward nine in 30, five under par, and returned in 34, two under par, for one of the finest two-man performances of the year in this section.

Frank Cunningham, assistant professional at Burning Tree, and Maury Fitzgerald, Kenwood amateur, pressed the winners closely with a best ball of 65, going out in 32 and returning in 33.

The tournament brought out one of the lowest nine-hole scores recorded in the Capital when Spencer shot a 31 on the outward nine in the process of shooting a 69 to tie with Cunningham for the special professional sweepstakes. Spencer struck a disastrous thirteenth hole, where he took a 7 on the incoming nine and finished with a 38 to offset his remarkable performance on the first half. The scores were only two over the course record of 67.

Cox, in honor of whom the festivities were held, shot a creditable 74 after taking four straight fives. Cox was honored in the evening at a dinner.

Ball Hits Player's Head; He Receives an Assist

Keene, N. H., July 15 (AP).—Everett Goggin uses his head when he plays baseball—and he's got a lump to prove it.

Chasing a fly ball yesterday while playing right field, Goggin fell in a hole and the ball struck him on the head. Center Fielder Howard Devoid caught the ball on the rebound. In addition to the lump on the head Goggin got an assist on the play.

Eighth Straight For Cubs as Phils Bow

Herman's Double in Tenth Decides Issue After Phils Rally.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 15.—The Chicago Cubs chalked up their eighth straight victory today but they were carried to ten innings by the Phillies before Bill Herman's line double with two out sent Augie Galan home with the run that gave them a 2-to-1 decision.

The third-place Cubs, fresh from a clean sweep for a five-game series with the Braves and two victories over the Pirates, put over a run in the first inning and apparently had the game won as Larry French and the former infielder, Bucky Walters, engaged in a scoreless hurling duel for the next seven frames. The run was unearned as Ethan Allen allowed Phil Cavarretta's single to get through him for a two-base error and Herman, who had singled, scored from first.

The Phillies rallied in the ninth, however, staving off defeat temporarily by tying the score. With one out, Johnny Moore singled and advanced to second when Vergez coaxed a walk out of Lon Warneke, who had replaced French. Deno Chiozza was sent in to run for Moore and when Pinch Hitter Joe Bowman crashed through with a single, raced home with the tying run.

The Cubs loaded the bases in the ninth on Herman's double and two walks but were unable to score as Pezzulo replaced Walter and fanned Pinch Hitter Stainback and then forced Stanley Hack to fly out.

Two Maxies To Fight on Sept. 26

Scheduled Battle Is in Direct Contradition of Mike Jacobs.

German Accepted Bid by Phone, Spurned Louis, Johnston Says.

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Heavyweight fight plans were turned topsy-turvy today when Madison Square Garden announced a 15-round battle between Max Baer, of California, and Max Schmeling, of Germany, for the Garden's Long Island Bowl September 26.

Forty-eight hours previously the Twentieth Century Club had announced negotiations were completed for Schmeling to meet Joe Louis, Detroit's Sepia Slasher, at the Polo Grounds September 18.

Jimmy Johnston, Garden promoter, in announcing the Schmeling-Baer bout, said he closed for the German's services in a long-distance telephone conversation with Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's manager, in Berlin. Jacobs promised to cable confirmation of acceptance of terms for the Baer match. Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager, signed with the Garden last Friday.

Winner to Face Braddock.

"I know nothing about the plans of Mike Jacobs or the Twentieth Century Club," said Johnston. "The Garden expects to put on a Baer-Schmeling match in September, with the winner to meet Champion James J. Braddock next June for the title."

Hoffman verified the fact he had signed with the Garden for Baer to meet Schmeling.

"I talked with Schmeling on the long-distance phone today in Berlin and he told me he had decided to accept the Baer match instead of the Joe Louis bout. Baer is ready and anxious to meet Schmeling again," he said.

From Chicago, where he is aiding in the promotion of the Louis-Levinsky bout August 8, Mike Jacobs, Twentieth Century Club promoter, expressed considerable doubt that Schmeling would abandon the Louis match. Jacobs immediately started burning up the wires to New York and Berlin in an attempt to land Schmeling without strings attached.

Wanted Bond Posted.

The only hitch, according to Jacobs, that had developed in negotiations with Schmeling was that the German wanted a bond guaranteeing his purse deposited in a German bank. Jacobs agreed to the bond, but wanted the money posted in a United States bank.

In the battle for Schmeling's services the Garden is offering as its main lure a title match with Braddock, who is under contract to box exclusively for the Garden. The Twentieth Century Club is banking on the more attractive financial terms of a Louis match winning the German.

Once before Schmeling has turned down a chance at the title for a match which would draw the larger gate. This was in 1933 when he rejected a bout with the then champion, Jack Sharkey, to take on Max Baer, only to lose on a technical knockout in the tenth round.

Sees $750,000 Gate.

Mike Jacobs predicts a Schmeling-Louis bout will gross $750,000 and pull the biggest non-championship crowd since the Dempsey-Sharkey bout drew $1,000,000 in 1927.

Inasmuch as Joe Jacobs went to Germany to bring back Schmeling for the Twentieth Century Club, fistic followers believe the German Maxie eventually will wind up fighting Joe Louis after all promises have been made, broken and remade. It was understood that Joe Jacobs' German expedition was financed by the Twentieth Century Club.

Garden Statement 'Hooey,' Says Rival

Chicago, July 15 (U.P.).—Announcement that Max Baer and Max Schmeling had agreed to fight for Madison Square Garden in New York was called a "lot of hooey" tonight by Mike Jacobs, promoter of the Twentieth Century Club, New York.

"As soon as I heard about Madison Square Garden's announcement today I called Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's manager, by transatlantic telephone," Mike Jacobs said.

"I got hold of him in Berlin and Drill Under Blistering Sun at Wimbledon; Team Not Picked.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 15.—Without showing a trace of overconfidence despite the fact that they are the unanimous choice of British experts and betting commissioners to defeat Germany in the Davis Cup Interzone final this week-end, the members of the American International Tennis squad put in two hours of hard practice today under a scorching sun at Wimbledon.

Nonplaying Capt. Joseph Wear, of Philadelphia, is making a point of not letting the singles players—Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex.; Don Budge, of Oakland, Calif., and Sidney B. Wood, jr., of New York—play against each other in order to avert anything resembling a "test match."

Selections Made.

Although the actual assignment of berths will not be made until the draw Friday, Wear has chosen Allison, Budge, Wood and John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, for the test with Germany, the winner to meet the cup-holding British team in the challenge-round.

In today's practice session Allison played against Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, the fifth member of the squad; Van Ryn opposed Budge, and Wood worked out with one of the assistant professionals of the Wimbledon Club. No scores were kept.

With only two more days left for hard practice prior to the engagement with Germany, every member of the squad appeared in tip-top shape. Wear is completely satisfied with his charges.

"If we are beaten this time there can't be any charges that the boys were 'over-tennised,'" Wear said.

Budge Favored.

Several British writers, mindful of Budge's remarkable showing in his first visit to Wimbledon for the 1935 all-England championships, anticipated the tall, red-haired Californian's selection with Allison to play the singles and even refused to concede he'll lose to Von Cramm a second time this year. Von Cramm eliminated Budge in the semifinal round 10 days ago in four sets, 4—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—2.

There was considerable speculation outside the American team's headquarters whether Wood would see action in the cup competition. The New Yorkers failed to make an impression in any of his showings to date.

In that event it will mean Allison will have to don double harness. He will play in the singles and it is regarded as a foregone conclusion he will team up with Van Ryn in the doubles.

Dean's Sale to Cubs Is Denied by Breadon

St. Louis, July 15 (AP).—Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis Cardinals' Baseball Club, denied today reports that Pitcher Dizzy Dean had been sold to the Chicago Cubs.

"There is not a single word of truth in such a report," Breadon said. "Sale of Dizzy Dean has not been discussed with any club—in fact, it has never been hinted by the Cubs that they wanted Dizzy."

The report that Dean had been sold (not carried by the Associated Press) said he would go to the Cubs' organization next fall.

The commission will act on the case tomorrow.

Savoldi sent a last-minute telegram to the promoters of the match that he would be unable to appear because of injury.

Fighter Rises At 10 Count, Too Late

Fans Protest Reynolds' Ruling; Rights to Chin Fell Battler.

Goldstein Stops Barry in First in Pro Debut; Furr Is Beaten.

By Ben Dulaney.

AMID the crashing thunder of boos and catcalls, the arm of Harry Dublinsky was raised in the wind at Griffith Stadium last night, indicating that he had won a first-round knockout over blond Bob Wilson, local hope.

The reverse ovation was not aimed at Dublinsky, but at the referee who refused to allow Wilson to continue after he arose at the count of ten. Young Bobby, seemingly in good shape, went sobbing to his corner.

Even in the two minutes that the conqueror of Canzoneri appeared he demonstrated his complete superiority over the local boy.

Wilson was able to land, but one real blow—a right to the mouth.

Goldstein Stops Foe.

In another abbreviated event, Bobby Goldstein, famed amateur and college lightweight, successfully made his pro debut by flooring Joe Barry, of Brooklyn in 60 seconds.

The ranking welter wa content at first to let Bob do his humble best to take the aggressive.

Midway in the round, the sharp-shooting Dublinsky found his range and embarked on the only attack of the battle.

Four unerring rights found Wilson's chin and the slender fighter went down under the ropes. At the count of five he raised himself but his manager, Patsy Donovan, across the ring, instructed him to stay down.

3,000 Protest Verdict.

Just as the gavel struck ten Wilson rose, Referee George Reynolds ruled that he was a split-second too late. The crowd of more than 3,000 thought differently and did everything but tear up the seats.

A threatening cloud sliding across the full moon moved up the feature event two fights ahead of its scheduled time.

In the semifinal which followed, Phil Furr, local welterweight, who announced his retirement after a beating by Tony Rock, essayed an unsuccessful comeback and lost a six-round unanimous decision to Frankie Blair, 150, of Camden, N. J. His rights bounced off the smaller man's shoulder and Blair was able to land numerous staggering punches.

Wins in One Minute.

Confident and cocky as he was during his years of college boxing, Goldstein stepped into the ring and stepped out again exactly one minute later with his first professional victory tucked safely and spectacularly away. Barry opened with a rush and Bobby hit him just once—a lightning right beneath the heart.

The Brooklyn boy staggered to his feet and ten seconds later was flat in the opposite corner—he barely tottered up at the nine count—Goldstein tapped him once almost

'35 Come-Back Crew Can Chortle in Chorus

By Dillon Graham.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

"WHO says we're washed up," chorus Lefty Grove, Ossie Bluege, Ted Lyons, Tony Lazzeri and Luke Sewell. They're among the American League comebacks of 1935.

Enjoying one of his best seasons, Lyons, the veteran Chicago right-hander, shut out the Yankees Sunday to score his tenth victory and make a closer battle for the American League pennant. One more triumph and Ted will equal his total wins of last year. He's lost only three games.

Ossie Bluege, one of the classiest fielders the majors have ever seen, apparently was through when he went South to the Washington training camp last fall. Cecil Travis, a heavy slugging youngster, had ousted him from third base and he was ranked third man in the scrap for the shortstop position. But Ossie is playing short regularly now, fielding like a marvel, coming through with timely bingles and outhitting his former boss, Joe Cronin.

Maeriel Wins by Two Lengths in Feature at Suffolk Downs

$4.40 Choice Victorious Over Jair

Tugboat Frank Is Third in Two-Year-Old Allowance Race.

By the Associated Press.

SUFFOLK DOWNS, Boston, July 15.—The top-weighted Maeriel, winner of the Juvenile at Belmont, made an auspicious start in New England racing circles today by capturing the fourth day feature, the Mayflower, an allowance affair for 2-year-olds over the 6-furlong route.

Running under the colors of the Maemere Farm of Dewitt Page, this son of Ariel and Myanza was two lengths to the good under the wire, although he was unplaced at the head of the stretch and paid $4.40 for a win ticket.

Ceaseless came out of the gate first, but quickly folded, surrendering the lead to Challephin, which in turn retired under the rush of Swashbuckler, that took charge in the run down toe back stretch.

Swashbuckler Folds.

Still in command at the stretch, Swashbuckler folded badly from there on and was unplaced. Mrs. Phillips' Jair, ably ridden by Charlie Stevenson, came powerfully in the final dash to the wire and was in for the place.

One and a half lengths in the rear was Tugboat Frank, which was badly placed at the stretch. When the field swung wide at the stretch turn Johnny Deering took him in hand and grabbed the show position from Seabiscuit.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EXCITE, $14.60, $11.80, $4.60; LIEUT. GREENOCK, $7.20, $3.00; NEDREIGH, $2.40.

EXCITE, unruly at the post, moved up steadily on the outside, responded gamely when called upon when reaching the stretch, wore down the leaders and was going away at the end. LIEUT. GREENOCK had good speed from the start and held on well at the end, though unable to stave off the bid of the winner. NEDREIGH, hustled to the front in the opening furlong and hard ridden, held on gamely to the end. KRONA, unable to keep pace early, closed with good courage. LIGHTWEIGHT was a prominent factor throughout. SHINING SUN never could reach the leaders. STUMPTOWN, slow to begin, was far back all the way.

SECOND RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 2:54. Off at 2:57½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TACK, $31.40, $10.20, $5.20; COUSIN GEORGE, $4.40, $3.00; PASS SHOT, $4.40.

TACK was kept within striking distance of the leaders while under restraint in the run down the back stretch, moved up steadily on the outside and, taking command in the stretch, drew out steadily under brisk urging. COUSIN GEORGE, steadied along for the first six furlongs, responded gamely to punishment when reaching the stretch and closed going determinedly. PASS SHOT moved up steadily on the outside down the back stretch and, hard ridden in the last quarter-mile, held on well to the end. RAMUS bore to the inside at the start forcing BROWN HILDA to take up, was raced along under slight restraint while forcing the pace, assumed a slight lead when the pacemaker tired, but was unable to keep up in the drive.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:33½. Winner, Mrs. F. M. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KIEVA, $13.80, $7.20, $4.20; WEE TUNE, $7.60, $4.60; KING'S PLEASURE, $4.00.

KIEVA, permitted to settle into her best strides and not hurried in the run through the back stretch, moved up on the outside when making her effort, took command in the stretch and, vigorously ridden, lasted to hold WEE TUNE safe. The latter, restrained early, came to the outside in the stretch, closed with a rush and just failed to be up in time. KING'S PLEASURE had speed from the start, disposed of CRACKLE and, moving to the front, was unable to keep pace in the final drive. DEAN SWIFT moved up steadily on the outside, faltering in the last three-sixteenths. DARK WAR had early speed, but tired. TRULY YOURS was never a prominent factor. CRACKLE stopped.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:07. Off at 4:07½. Winner, Ral Parr's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR PORTER, $10.80, $5.00, $3.60; MOTTO, $4.60, $3.20; ALL FORLORN, $3.40.

STAR PORTER moved up stoutly in the first quarter-mile, was steadied along within striking distance of the pace, was placed under punishment when nearing the stretch, moved up fast, took command before reaching the furlong pole and drew clear at the end. MOTTO, outpaced early, came with a rush through the stretch. ALL FORLORN showed good speed, was much used in racing with AJACCIO and, unable to stave off the bids of the first two, AJACCIO, on the inside, was in hand while racing with ALL FORLORN and flattened out when called upon. MISS MOROCCO was going gamely at the end. HAPPY HELEN was unable to reach the leaders. EARL PORTER was always far back.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. The Mayflower. Purse, $2,500. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:42. Off at 4:48. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAERIEL, $4.40, $4.00, $3.00; JAIR, $4.80, $4.20; TUGBOAT FRANK, $5.80.

MAERIEL followed in nearest pursuit of SWASHBUCKLER while the latter was establishing the pace, went into command when called upon and drew out easily through the last furlong. JAIR was well placed from the start, dropped back after rounding the far turn, but came again through the stretch run. TUGBOAT FRANK, away well, lacked speed to keep pace, dropped back, but closed stoutly on the inside through the last three-sixteenths. SEABISCUIT made up some ground though never a serious contender at any stage of the journey. SWASHBUCKLER showed good speed for the first half-mile, faltering in the last quarter-mile. CHALLEPHEN loomed up threateningly at the stretch turn, but weakened in the last furlong.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:21. Off at 5:24½. Winner, J. U. EASIEST WAY went to the front in the first few strides, was steadied along in front, lost command to LEGENDER, but coming again under strong handling, was up in the closing stride. LEGENDER, in nearest pursuit of the leader throughout, went to the front nearing the stretch, fought it out courageously and just failed to last. SAND BABY, outpaced early, came around on the outside and closed with a rush. XANDRA was well placed the entire way, though unable to improve her position in the closing drive. JOHN'S BIRTHDAY, well placed early, faltered when the real racing began. JOVIUS made up some ground through the stretch after having raced far back for most of the journey.

WEE WINK, never far from the leaders, came around on the outside entering the stretch and, wearing down EPITAPH for the lead, drew clear at the end. RENAISSANCE worked his way up steadily and came willingly in the stretch run. EPITAPH had good speed from the start and held on well to the end, though unable to stave off the bids of the first two in the closing stages. GOLD SIGNET, well up all the way, was unable to improve his position when called upon in the stretch. HUG AGAIN never could enter into serious contention. BELLE GRIER was outrun. FABIUS was going willingly at the end. MOANE KEALA showed good speed for the first half-mile, tiring thereafter.

Children to Vie in Pony Show Saturday

Virginians Will Compete in Benefit Event at Chevy Chase.

A BAND of hard-riding youngsters from the Virginia fox hunting country around Warrenton, Upperville and Middleburg will enliven the children's classes at the charity horse and pony show to be held by the American Legion at Chevy Chase, Md., on Saturday as a benefit for the Montgomery County Hospital.

A number of members of the Warrenton Junior Hunt, led by their secretary, Miss Mildred Gaines, are to show their spirited little mounts in the pony classes, which will begin at 9:30 o'clock as the opening feature of one of the most attractive horse show programs ever arranged around the Capital.

Bringing Two Winners.

Miss Gaines is planning to bring at least two of her blue ribbon winners to the show and may exhibit three others if they round out all right in schooling this week. She has indicated that other members of the hunt are preparing for the legion show also.

The Warrenton Junior Hunt is one of the most active organizations of juvenile riders in the country and stage their own hunts over their own country the same as their parents, who make up the famed Warrenton Hunt. In addition they stage their own show each year and recently performed before an audience of 5,000 spectators.

Colorful Show.

Their addition to the exhibitors' list will add much color to the legion event, which is to be held in Rock Creek Park just off the East-West highway. Another Virginia exhibitor in the pony classes will be Miss Ann Bayly, of Upperville, daughter of the well-known Roger Bayly, who will show his string of fine hunters in the afternoon events.

The Virginia children have been attracted to the nearby Maryland event by an assortment of the most attractive and most valuable prizes ever presented hereabouts. Silver vases will be offered in each class for ponies, while six ribbon awards are to be made in each competition.

Turner Okays Mat Manners of Rivals

Shutting one eye and putting tongue in cheek, Promoter Joe Turner will present as the feature match of Thursday's wrestling card at the ball park two performers whose weapons have been declared "too murderous for use" in several States.

The disputed "weapons" are Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg's maiming flying tackle and the ghastly drop kick, made infamous by Joe Savoldi. When either thrust is properly executed, the victim invariably finds himself lolling among the proverbial sweetpeas.

However, Promoter Turner, dictating his own policies locally, is stanchly opposed to depriving the customers of the thrill due them. Accordingly, the genial maestro of mat affairs has instructed Sonnenberg to tackle to his heart's content and Savoldi to kick, pull or tug whenever the occasion presents itself.

Chicago, July 15.—Penncote, racing for L. E. Komouris, of Chicago, and ridden by Jockey F. Ritz, galloped to a surprise victory today at Arlington Park.

In her previous races Penncote had been quitting but today the 4-year-old daughter of Pennant—Cherrycote led the field from start to finish in the mile race.

N. Evans' Lily May was second and Mrs. W. T. Westrope's Tiny Kitty third. Penncote was clocked in 1:38 despite the fact that she ran out at the head of the stretch.

Mutuels paid $19.80.

Whitney Horse Is Victor at Empire

Scores at Odds of 5 to 1; Boston Brook Takes Place Position.

By the Associated Press.

EMPIRE CITY, N. Y., July 15. Rough Diamond, roguish 3-year-old in the effete C. V. Whitney Stable, fooled the boys again in the first division of the Briarwood, a class "C" handicap that was split and run as the third and fourth events here today. The son of Mad Hatter, which was bothered, then stumbled and sulked along in last place when he was an even-money favorite a few days ago, ran to his best form this time and won by a length at 5 to 1.

Boston Brook, representing W. A. Jones, headed Mrs. W. P. Stewart's Chance Ray for the place. Candy Maid, winner of two straight at Narragansett, was the favorite. She stopped after making the pace into the stretch and finished just out of the picture. The time for the 6 furlongs was 1:10.

Silvio Coucci Up.

Silvio Coucci was astride Rough Diamond. The colt seems to do his best when the "Bronx Express" handles the reins. He was far back in the early stages today and it seemed that he would refuse to do much better than in his last start, but "Little Cooch" succeeded in making the Whitneyite exert himself to the limit as the combination came around the leaders turning for home. Coucci used his whip and Rough Diamond gamely outfinished the other three horses that fought it out with him in the thrilling drive.

Polycletus, a winner Saturday and therefore obliged to pick up a three-pound penalty which made his weight 130 pounds, found the heavy package a bit too much in the second half of the Briarwood. The speedy gelding was unable to take his usual long early lead and finished a half length behind Cycle, a 10-to-1 shot that had not raced since last September. Headin Home was a well beaten third.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

HARRISONBURG, Va., July 15. The Culpeper champions enter the final week of the first half of the Valley League season with a game and a half lead over Front Royal and a two-game advantage over Charlottesville.

Most anything can happen regarding first-half honors as Front Royal has only two games to play—with Orange and Staunton—second division clubs, while Charlottesville and Culpeper each have five games to play to complete the 21 for the first half.

Charlottesville, winner of eight of the last nine games, until Front Royal halted the streak Saturday, and Culpeper must meet in two games and the outcome of these clashes will largely decide whether Culpeper is to take the first-half crown. While their rivals were idle Front Royal turned in a double victory over Waynesboro, their third in two days, to regain second place over the university city lads.

Front Royal, already boasting the greatest number of victories of any club, would stand a much better chance in the crucial week had not Charlottesville come to life in the ninth inning to score four runs and take a game badly needed by the All-Stars.

Only Four Losses.

Culpeper won over Waynesboro and Staunton during the week to retain its lead and so far the champions have only four defeats against their record. With Lacy, Walter Beall and McIntyre going well, Culpeper will be hard to stop in either half. Front Royal, however, is just as confident of the pitching prowess of Bob Cassell, Lefty Stankus, Boerner and Jewett.

Harrisonburg, runners up to the Culpeper champions a year ago, should capture honors for inconsistency of attack. The locals were blanked by Staunton Friday and then collected 26 hits off Lefty Lyons, of the Heurich Brewers, to register a 15 to 7 victory and a league hitting record. With all their hitting, Harrisonburg did not overcome a six-run lead of the Heurichs until the sixth inning. Then, yesterday, Harrisonburg showed another display of light hitting and barely eked out a 3-to-0 victory over Orange, thanks to the fine hurling of Schmidt and some walks by Tisdale, the Orange ace.

Waynesboro, which led the league in its early stages, continued on its losing streak and descended into the cellar.

By the United Press.

Boston, July 15.—Mildred (Babe) Didrikson has earned between $35,000 and $40,000 since turning professional two years ago, she disclosed here today.

The Texas girl athlete, appearing locally with Gene Sarazan in a golfing act, said she had invested most of her earnings in annuity bonds, and that after two or three more years of payments she would have an income of $412 monthly.

Miss Didrikson said she had lost $3,000 to $5,000 last spring while trying to gain recognition as an amateur golfer. Most of her professional contracts, she said, stipulate that she must not marry.

Mrs. Fred Davis Tops Griswold Tourney

Cards 79 to Lead Rivals in Annual Rhode Island Classic.

By the Associated Press.

EASTERN POINT, Conn., July 15.—Mrs. Frederick J. Davis, of Providence, three times winner of the Rhode Island championship, set the pace today with a 79 in the qualifying round of Shennecossett's seventeenth annual Griswold Cup tournament.

Long off the tee and methodical in her iron shots, the comparatively small but athletic matron shot 11 holes in par and went one over on each of the others to beat out two of the tournament favorites, Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, Eastern champion and six times Griswold Cup winner, and Miss Jean Bauer, of Providence, who captured the Griswold Trophy and the qualifying medal last year.

Mrs. Davis, who went out in 39 and came back in 40, finished one stroke ahead of Mrs. Vare and two better than Miss Bauer.

Out in 38.

Mrs. Vare, who set the tournament qualifying score of 76 in 1925, shot the first nine in 38 but faltered on the way back as she ran into four kinds of trouble. She roughed one drive, sent another into a trap, overshot one green and three-putted another, each at a cost of a stroke.

Miss Bauer, out in 39, had a bad day in the sand traps, where she wasted five strokes. She took a seven and a 42 for the homeward nine for an 81.

Scores of 91 or lower gained the 16 places for the rounds of match play which start tomorrow. Other qualifiers included Helen Waterhouse, former Rhode Island champion, who produced an 82; her sister, Bette Waterhouse, 83; Mrs. Jonathon Thorne, metropolitan champion, 84, and Mrs. Charles E. Brainard, of Hartford, 85.

Pairings for the first round of match play:

Upper half—Mrs. Frederick Davis vs. Mrs. Jabish Holes; Bette Waterhouse vs. Virginia Bascom; Jean Bauer vs. Helen Bennett; Mrs. C. W. Brainard vs. Kathrin W. Foster.

Lower half—Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare vs. Mrs. Charles J. Downey; Mrs. Jonathon Thorne vs. Ruth M. Adel; Helen Waterhouse vs. Anne Krumbhaaer; Mrs. Charles T. Voss vs. Mrs. Theodore Sheaffer.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FREDERICK, Md., July 15.—Middletown defeated New Windsor, 9 to 3; Brunswick whitewashed Emmitsburg, 7 to 0; Union Bridge set back Thurmont, 8 to 4, and Taneytown took the measure of Woodsboro, 7 to 4.

Middletown's victory which enabled the Valleyites to hold on to first place in the pennant race by a slender lead was the result mainly of home runs by Arthur Hauver and Jake Rudy. The latter's drive to centerfield with two on base was one of the longest every made on the Middletown field. While Hauver was touched up for nine hits he was at his best with men on bases. The game was won in the third inning when Hauver singled was advanced to second by C. Remsberg and scored on a single by Palmer. Middletown added two more in the fifth and chalked up three in the eighth.

Scoring five runs in the first inning on singles by Bankard Young and Minnick, a bunt which Bowman beat to first, a sacrifice by Nicodemus, an infield hit by Utz which got away from Bankart, a wild pitch and a hit batsman enabled Union Bridge to settle the issue with Thurmont in the initial frame. Shaffer then settled down and held the Carroll County team to three runs the remainder of the game. Minnick blanked the Mountaineers until the third inning when two runs were scored. One more was added in the seventh session and the last was put over in the eighth. The victory put Union Bridge on even terms with Thurmont for third place in the pennant race.

Team Comes From Rear.

Taneytown came from behind to set back Woodsboro. The lime burners took the lead in the second inning when a double by Eaves, singles by Henry and Art Crum, two fielder's choices and an outfield fly accounted for three runs. Taneytown evened the count in the fifth frame and won in the sixth on a pass, a hit batsman and a double by Ecker, which accounted for two runs. Woodsboro went scoreless from the second to the seventh inning when a double by Harry Smith and a triple by Houck put across one run. Bollinger was hurt in the fourth inning and was forced to retire. Pete Stout, Woodsboro's shortstop hurt his arm while practicing and will be out of the line-up for a week.

Four of Brunswick's runs in the game with Emmitsburg was the result of costly errors by the North County players. Althoff held the Railroaders to eight hits, but misplays in the first, third and fourth innings counted for runs. While Woody Younkins was touched up for six hits the blows were scattered and eight Emmitsburg players were stranded on the paths. In addition to hurling a shut-out game Younkins contributed a triple, the longest hit of the game.

Willie Osteen Advances in Net Evnt

Beats Lucille McDowell in Playground Tourney; Mary Gray Wins.

THE indomitable courage of a true champion yesterday carried Willie Osteen, of Virginia avenue, to a thrilling triumph over Lucille McDowell in the third round the the girls' singles in the annual District playground tennis tournament. The scores were 5—7, 6—4, 13—11.

By her surprise victory Miss Osteen not only added to the lengthening strnig of surprises that have distinguished this year's tourney, but also advanced to the quarter-finals wherein she will encounter Eileen Lennon, of Montrose, this afternoon at Chevy Chase.

Miss Osteen made a remarkable recovery in winning after losing the first set. Her opponent appeared content to lose the second when the eventual winner rallied, conserving her energy for the third set. The pair battled tooth and nail in the finale, winning on their services until the score stood 11-all. Here the Virginia avenue champion smashed through Miss McDowell's service to assume the lead at 12—11, and then prcoeed to victory by taking the deciding game on her own lead.

Mary Gray Scores Upset.

Another upset was supplied yesterday by Mary Gray, of Happy Hollow, who eliminated Esther Stein, Twin Oaks, by scores of 6—3, 2—6, 6—1.

In other matches played, Charlotte Decker, Janney, won over Virginia Hunter, Twin Oaks, 8—6, 6—2, and Helen Orme, Burroughs, conquered Lillian Goodwin, of Thomson, 6—0, 6—4.

Still Has His Punch.

The local embryo lawyer and former University of Virginia ring captain wasn't under the bright lights long enough to show what he had—to indicate whether a layoff of a year and a half had done him harm.

One thing was certain, however, Bobby still had his punch. Against classier opposition he may become one of the greatest drawing cards Washington has seen.

In the first 4-rounder, one young Joe Louis (colored), of Baltimore, fought to a furious street corner decision over Sammy Williams, of Washington.

In the final bout, Paris Apice, young Italian lightweight from Providence, R. I., outpointed Paolo Villa, transplanted Mexican, in six rounds of uninspired boxing.

Bill Temes, young, tough brother of Joe Temes, well-known hereabouts, used a 7-pound advantage in weight to drub Gene Barrett, Detroit 130-pounder, in six rounds. Temes carried the fight all the way, but Barrett's footwork and his gameness kept him on his feet.

New Crime-Fighting School Is Projected

By the Associated Press.

Another crime-fighters college would be set up in Washington beside the "G Men's" training school under a bill now awaiting Senate action.

The new school would train Federal District attorney and marshals in the ways of crimefighting, under a new Justice Department unit to be known as the Bureau of Crime Prevention.

The unit would also act as a clearing house for information on State and local police systems, crime statistics and other weapons in the fight on lawlessness.

Maurice "Gook" Taylor, Investigation's pilot, clamped down on some of the "big heads" on the team. It has proved a good move . . . Talk about a funny coincidence . . . The opposing pitchers, Norman and Giller, in the Army Medico-Shipping Board game a few days ago, both hit triples and both failed to touch first base, thus nullifying credit for the blows. The keen-eyed umpire was J. E. Cobean . . . Eddie Dove is not wearing a Heurich uniform any longer. Rumors have him signed up with the Sanitary Grocery team in the same league . . . Burt Shipley, Maryland University coach, is managing the Tarboro team in the Carolina League during the vacation months. He would give his last shirt for a good pitcher . . . Dick Knight, Heurich's flashy outfielder, became a bridegroom two weeks ago. And Ralph Bennie and Ed Radke are due to be wed within the next fortnight. It will be the second time for Bennie . . . Lefty Lyons, G. P. O., hurler will be out of action for several days with a hurt finger. Lefty says it was caught in an automobile door, but flappered-eared Fitzgerald alleges he mistook it for a pretzel and almost bit it off while drinking beer . . . Young Vic Gauzza, minus four teeth, has resumed his outfield post with P. W. A. . . . Joe Giammatteo's brilliant fielding and hitting are the talk of the Federal League. In his debut he was chiefly responsible for the first win Federal Communications has scored in league competition . . . Francis Peffer boasts a record of five victories for Pig 'n' Whistle in the National City loop. So does Joe DiNenna, Blue Flame pitcher . . . Fred Eisinger, press agent for Heurich's, has lost that peaked look since basking in the sun during the last three weeks . . . Is John "McGraw" Maragon on his vacation? But then Scorekeeper Pierce is no mean orator, himself. He is not as vociferous as John, but his gestures are more passionate.

Hansen to Chattanooga.

The Nats yesterday acquired Pitcher Roy Snipe Hansen upon his release by the St. Louis Browns and transferred him to Chattanooga, their Washington farm. The horses of the Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt stables have won stakes worth $160,000 this year, but their owner does not figure to more than break even for the season . . . saying Vanderbilt races "for fun and not for profit," experts point out that his elaborate farms and stables, the small army he employs, his payment of nomination and entrance fees and his insistence on transporting his horses and jockeys all first class over the country will drain all his winnings . . . Following in the footsteps of her grandfather, Steve Brodie, who became famous by jumping off the Brooklyn Bridge, Helen Howard, Southern A. A. U. diving champion, will jump into New York waters this week-end competing in the national women's diving championship . . . she jumps head first, however . . . Coaches Red Blaik, of Dartmouth; Ralph Sasse, of Mississippi, and Biff Jones, of Oklahoma, all Army men, will gather in Maine next month for a football conference . . . Nothing Yet Definite, Declares Joe Jacobs

Berlin (Tuesday) July 16 (U.P.).—Joe Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion, said today that nothing definite had been decided about Max's next opponent for a fight in the United States.

Jacobs Signs Art Lasky As Opponent of Louis

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 15.—Mike Jacobs, astute promoter of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, reached into his magic war-bonnet today and pulled out another contract when he announced that Art Lasky had been signed to fight Joe Louis before the snow flies.

Jacobs said there was a possibility Art would face the Dark Angel in the latter part of August or that he might be tossed into the breach in September in the event Max Schmeling backs down on his tentative Louis bout. Mike also announced that he had signed Kingfish Levinsky to battle for his club. The latter move was made to spike opposition guns should the Kingfish put Joseph on the carpet when they meet this summer.

Bonus Systems Are Tripled in Eleven Years

Conference Board Reports Piece Wage Rates Off Two-Fifths.

New York, July 15.—Premium and bonus systems of wage payments in effect in 1935 cover approximately three times as many wage earners as in 1924, according to data collected by the National Industrial Conference Board in a survey of financial incentives in modern industry. The proportions of wage earners on piece rates has dropped two-fifths in the same interval while the proportion on time rates is virtually unchanged.

The conference board's report covers 631 companies employing more than 700,000 wage earners.

Premium or bonus plans are relatively more popular in the medium-size plants than in either the very small or very large establishments. In plants employing between 250 and 999 wage earners, 23.2 per cent were being paid under premium or bonus plans. In plants employing from 1,000 to 4,999, the proportion was 24.4 per cent. This contrasts with the percentages in the small plants and large plants, 14.1 per cent and 19.9 per cent, respectively.

Straight-time rates are most common in the automotive industry, where 83.4 per cent of the workers are paid on that basis. Individual piece rates lead in the clothing industry, 80.4 per cent of the workers being compensated on that plan as compared with 15.7 per cent on straight time and 3.8 per cent on premium or bonus plans.

Reports from the printing and publishing establishments indicate that 54 per cent of the wage earners are on premium or bonus plans, 44 per cent on straight time and only 2 per cent on individual piece rates.

	Mon.	Sat.
Advances	317	205
Declines	219	195
Unchanged	172	164

Bonds—A general advance in rails enabled the bond market to work slightly lower. Federals were steady. Industrials breezed along with the leaders but utilities lagged somewhat. Latin-American issues were strong. Transfers aggregated $8,181,000.

Curb—Stocks worked moderately higher under leadership of metals, specialties, and industrials.

Grains—Cautiously following 5 and 4 cents per bushel jumps on the Kansas City and Minneapolis wheat pits, the Chicago price scored gains of over 3 cents. Closings were nervous, July wheat at 82, July corn at 82¾.

Cotton—Cotton was quiet and steady in a narrow range. Closes were steady, 5 points higher to 1 point lower. July at 12.03.

Steel Industry Is Scheduled for 39.9%

New York, July 15 (AP).—Showing a further rebound from the low level reached in the Independence Day week, the steel industry is scheduled to operate this week at an average of 39.9 per cent of capacity, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today.

This would make a gain of 4.6 percentage points over the preceding week, and mark the most important recovery in production since the reaching of the peak level in the spring.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stock Prices Set Higher in Moderate Trading—Bonds Hold Firm—Wheat Bounds Forward on Crop Damage Fears.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, July 15.

Midsummer found financial markets rather drowsy, but far more active than they were at the nadir of the depression. Stocks plodded along, with a turnover of a little under a million shares, and with moderate gains for most issues. Bonds were steady to strong and commodities were enlivened by wheat's spurt. Frightened anew by crop damage reports shorts covered their positions by buying. Extreme advances were 3 cents a bushel or more. September options at Chicago closed 2½ cents higher at 82¾ cents a bushel.

Stock trading converged on three salients—steels, rails and equipments. No stock nor any group was powerful enough to awaken much speculative enthusiasm. Widest gains were made in assorted preferred issues, and the market maintained its predominantly investment character.

Steel issues were helped by the institute's prediction of another sharp rebound in the industry's operating rate. Leading shares rose a point or more. Some of the minor issues had a good run. Sloss Sheffield extended its gain of the past week to ten points. Inland and National sold at new high levels.

Southern Pacific was unusually active among the rails. Santa Fe advanced over a point to the best prices of the present movement. Delaware & Hudson climbed a point. Great Northern bested its best price of the year in rising a good fraction. New York Central was well liked.

Railway equipment stocks held their recent following. Brake Shoe, American, Pullman, Westinghouse Air Brake made substantial gains. Motors were firm but less active. Motor accessories were mixed. Briggs Auto Lite and Timken kept above water. Kelsey-Hayes topped a new price. Bohn continued its recovery.

In the foods, Corn Products lost 2 points and United Fruit picked up 2 markers. Coppers, silvers and the amusements were brittle. Associated Dry Goods continued active and scored. The second preferred gained 7 points on one sale. Electric Boat was a minor feature of the market, with its new high price. Auburn was dull on its statement of deficit. Western Union softened.

Some of the minor foreign exchanges were weak, including Hungarian and Polish currencies, but trading in sterling and francs was dull. The French national holiday helped to put a damper on the market, and influences in general were more nerveless than they have been for years. Money markets were expressionless.

Some improvement in business after the holiday setback is taking place. For the second successive week the steel industry has quickened its pace. This week's operating rate, according to the American Iron and Steel Institute, will rise nearly 5 points to 39.9 per cent of capacity. That is a rate at which the steel companies can make a living after a fashion and which reflects less seasonal depression than existed last year. Otherwise trade news was scanty, and anyhow the markets did not appear to be especially sensitive to the news.

Interest in the financial district still is keen in what undoubtedly is the most important legislative contribution to recovery—that section of the banking bill which would help to reopen the new capital market through restoration of the underwriting privilege to the banks. It is difficult even at this short distance from Washington to follow the course of the banking bill. It is well known that the President opposes the underwriting section, and it is as well known that many high Government officials, as well as influential members of Congress, strongly favor it.

In Wall Street there is no difference of opinion on the desirability of allowing the large banks to make available their resources to the underwriting of securities. The handfull of competent underwriting houses now in operation have far too little capital to handle a lively new issues market. They could tap the large banking resources through borrowing, but the financial responsibilities of that undoubtedly would deter them. The new capital market won't get far without bank underwriting, and if the President really desires business recovery he scarcely can find a good reason for blocking the flow of capital into industry.

Such differences of opinion as has arisen in the financial district over the underwriting section of the bank bill is in the manner of bank re-entry. Al aldmit that the section has some ambiguity in it, but it expressly forbids the two sins which the reformers charged against the banks and which supposedly led to the barring of underwriting two years ago. Underwriting banks are not permitted to sell the new issues to their trust accounts or clients, nor to pass them along to the smaller banks.

A few bankers who wish to see the wording changed claim that both those acts might be possible, by hook or crook, under the underwriting section as now written. Apparently what they really have in mind is permission to the banks merely to underwrite on behalf of dealers. The other and larger section of banking and legal opinion holds the proper safeguards are now in the bill, and that none of the alleged dangers are present.

Packard Net Is $1,400,000

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 15.—Alvan Macauley, president of the Packard Motor Car Co., announced today that net profits of approximately $1,400,000 will be shown by the company for the three months ended June 30. Unit production for the quarter, he said, was 17,040 cars, compared with 1,241 in the same quarter of 1934. A large part of the output was represented in the company's new lower-priced model.

Macauley said the second quarter operations resulted in a substantial increase in cash. After all payments, except current bills, he said, cash will amount to approximately $9,600,000, an increase of about $3,350,000 over that on March 31.

The company has scheduled a production of 6,400 cars for July.

June shipments of Packard's two lines of cars totaled 6,513 and were the largest in the company's history. The company ended the six months' period with a large bank of orders on hand.

Packard is increasing its facilities for manufacture of the One Twenty. Work already has been started in certain departments looking to this end and additional tools and equipment will be purchased shortly.

While bulk of Packard's output has been in the new light model, sales of the higher priced line have increased around 15 per cent over a year ago. Although sale of expensive cars has suffered drastically in recent years Packard has succeeded in more than holding its own, its percentage in the fine car class advancing to around 45 per cent, as compared with 38 per cent a year ago.

Municipal Bond Adjustment Bill Is Under Fire

Investment Bankers Fear Effect on Total of $16,000,000,000.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Local investment banking circles interested in the stability of $16,000,000,000. of municipal bonds now outstanding yesterday declared themselves deeply concerned over a pending legislative proposal to amend the municipal bankruptcy act.

The measure, passed by the Senate, and now before the House Judiciary Committee, is said by them to cast a shadow over all municipal securities. They asserted that its value and appropriateness is being seriously questioned by legal and bond experts.

Reportedly the measure was pushed through the upper house with the greatest dispatch and it is understood that a great deal of pressure is now being brought to bear for enactment by the House of Representatives.

To the knowledge of all questioned, no public hearings were held on the measure. Although both the Investment Bankers Association of America and the United States Chamber of Commerce were anxious to combat the bill, neither of these organizations was aware that it was pending until it had passed the Senate.

Object of the proposal is to provide that in any case where the United States Government or one of its agencies offers to make a loan on to a taxing district for the purpose of paying off the outstanding bonds of the district at a discount from par value, a bankruptcy proceeding may be instituted without the consent of the creditors. A United States District Court may confirm the debt and adjustment plan without the consent of any of the bondholders.

Immediate object of the bill is to compel the holders of bonds issued by some drainage and irrigation districts to accept the cash payment which would be provided by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan to the district.

In some cases the amount of proposed cash payment in full settlement is only 10 to 15 per cent of the face value of the bonds outstanding.

Holders of the bonds have strongly opposed settlement on such a basis. The new law would provide a method for legal disregard of their rights. Under present provisions of the municipal bankruptcy act a large proportion of the bondholders must consent to a plan before action can be taken.

Practice has been the sending of representatives to districts that are in financial difficulties. Their ability to pay is determined. Then a loan is offered that would pay the bondholders for their bonds at discounts. Under the present law ample protection is furnished so that a majority of the creditors must acquiesce before the transfer can be made.

Municipal securities that would be involved include loans to counties, cities, towns, villages and school districts, as well as drainage, irrigation and levee districts.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

(This is the tenth in a series on foreign civil service.)

ORGANIZATION of British civil service employes was greatly stimulated by the introduction of the Whitley Councils (arbitration groups) in 1919 and further by formal invitation of His Majesty's government to all grades to form associations for purposes of negotiation.

There are three major organizations—the Union of Postoffice Workers and the Civil Service Confederation, each with a membership of about 100,000, and the Civil Service Clerical Association, an aggressive group with about 20,000 members. In addition to this trio, there are nearly 200 smaller "associations." The association movement has embraced all grades, including the highest offices in the civic service.

Affiliation of civil service unions with labor unions is prohibited under clause V of the trade disputes and trades-union act of 1927. It is well to note here that organized American Government workers are divided on this point, several groups being affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, while several are not affiliated.

Clause V also forbids associations to pursue "political objects." This has not been regarded as preventing mass agitation for improving working conditions, but rather as excluding agitation such as occured during the general strike of 1926.

Clause V, a significant piece of legislation which might some day appear in Congress, follows:

"Amongst the regulations as to the conditions of service in his majesty's civil establishments there shall be included regulations prohibiting established civil servants from being members, delegates or representatives of any organization of which the primary object is to influence or affect the remuneration and conditions of employment of its members, unless the organization is an organization of which the membership is confined to persons employed by or under the crown and is an organization which complies with such provisions as may be contained in the regulations for securing that it is in all respects independent of, and not affiliated to, and such organization as aforesaid the membership of which is not confined to persons employed by or under the crown or any federation comprising such organizations, that its objects do not include political objects, and that it is not associated directly or indirectly with a political party or organization."

Through their intimate relations to Whitley councils and to the departments, the many unions and associations of British civil servants have become instruments of administration. They are a power supporting and animating the staff sides of national and departmental councils. They defend the interests of their members against attacks from taxpayers' organizations, from the press, from the politicians and from Parliament. They develop programs of reform and occasionally press for consultation on fundamental issues of departmental policy.

In summary, the British civil service is years nearer a perfect system than the American civil service. Patronage is unheard of in Great Britain's public service; they have a more humane retirement policy; their leave allowance is more generous; political neutrality reigns throughout; the public service is a career service; recruitment and promotions are strictly on basis of merit.

Public service in France will be discussed tomorrow.

Invitation to Photographers.

Amateur photographers interested in agriculture are invited by Ernest L. Gooden (P) to meet him in room 2050 at 4:45 p. m. today. Mr. Gooden, an expert photographer, is with the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine. He promises to take up individual problems of the department's camera fans and tell how to get the best out of vacation snapshots.

Wharton Clay, special assistant to the director, Industries Division, FHA, is expected to return tomorrow from Moorehead City, N. C., where he delivered an address before the Tile and Brick Manufacturers Association.

Architects Hold Exhibit.

The fourth annual exhibit conducted by the Association of Federal Architects, now being held at the New National Museum Building, is attracting many visitors.

The material shown includes photographs, drawings, watercolors, oil paintings, etchings, placques, renderings and elevations, and blueprints executed by the various members, and the following branches of the Government are represented: Veterans' Administration; Construction Division, Quartermaster General's Office, War; Procurement Division, Treasury (Supervising Architect's Office); Post Office Department; Department of Agriculture; Bureau of Yards and Docks, Navy, and the PWA Housing Division.

G. H. Buckingham (F), Procurement Division, Treasury, has been named the winner in the certificate competition drawings.

Matthew W. Stirling, chief, Bureau of American Ethnology, returned yesterday from a month's field work in Georgia and Florida. Mrs. Stirling accompanied him.

RETURNING aboard the Baltimore Mail Line's S. S. City of Norfolk after a three month's visit to Europe, William J. Lloyd (F), topographic engineer, Geological Survey, is most enthusiastic about the hospitality of the British Isles. He passed most of his time in Nantyglo (Coal-in-the-Brook), Wales, where his father and mother were born.

"Everybody sings in Wales," Mr. Lloyd says. "They have remarkable vocal ranges and a wide repertoire of songs. In contrast to the cheerful and courteous treatment I met in England, my trip to France was very unpleasant. The charm of Paris and quaint French customs were lost to me under a continuous round of overcharging and discourtesy. I was shocked at the crudeness of the 'soak-the-Americans policy in France," Mr. Lloyd declared.

Mr. Lloyd is active with various scientific groups of Washington which meet at the Cosmos Club.

Employment will be given to 2,300 persons for one month under the allotment of $350,000 to Coast and Geodetic Survey, Commerce, it is estimated at Public Works Administration. The money will be expended for the tide and coastal surveys and the modernization of charts.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor today between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: (F), Loew's Fox (stage, Frank and Milt Britton and Band, Sylvia Mannon Revue and other acts; screen, Washington's Lynne Overman in "Men Without Names"); or to (P), Loew's Palace (second week of William Powell and Luise Rainer in "Escapade"); or to (C), Loew's Columbia (third week of Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery in "No More Ladies").

Topographical work in the 48 States will be speeded up under the allotment of $993,700 to Geological Survey, Interior, according to Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes.

Student Engineers Needed.

Applications for examination for the position of student engineer (highways), at $1,260 a year will be accepted until July 30, Civil Service Commission announces. The positions are open in the Bureau of Public Roads, Agriculture.

Applicants must have completed at least three years of an engineering course in an engineering college of recognized standing; provided that none may enter the examination who have completed the required college work prior to May 1932.

Competitors will be rated on practical questions on civil and highway engineering and their supporting subjects.

The positions are largely seasonal in nature and those employed may be furloughed at the end of the construction season. However, they may be re-employed the following season without further examination.

The necessary forms may be obtained from the Manager, Fourth Civil Service District, Seventh and E streets northwest.

New Employe Union.

Organization of a new local of the National Federation of Federal Employes, located at Bismarck, N. Dak., is announced by N. F. F. E. secretary-treasurer, Gertrude M. McNally. The latest unit in N. F. F. E.'s Nation-wide chain of employe unions was formed largely through the efforts of National Organizer Earl R. Hoage, who is well known to thousands of Government workers in Washington, Miss McNally said.

Plans also were announced last night for the chartering of a local at Fort Yates, N. Dak. Employes in a wide variety of Federal services are represented at both points.

Culbertson on Bridge

1473.

Kibitzer's Delight.

Certain bridge games are what might be called "kibitzer's delights"—and I do not refer to games where the performances of the players are so bad they tickle the onlooker's risibilities. Far from it.

The game to watch is the game involving four experts. Great players concentrate not so much on play, which, with the exception of the rare boners to which even they are prone, is somewhat automatic. They devote their major efforts to problems of tactics, amusing generally that, once the bidding is over and the opening lead is made, neither the defending side nor the declarer will receive many gifts. And it is from observing these tactical maneuvers that the kibitzing connoisseur will derive his main delight.

Time to Retire.

There are times when the soundest bidding course is to retire temporarily from the bidding, determining later, after your opponents and partner have told their story whether or not to rejoin the festivities. It was at a week-end party of bridge experts at Culbertson Farms that the following hand occurred and I enjoyed the display of tactical fireworks from a comfortable kibitzer's chair.

North, Dealer
North-South vulnerable

1—A fine example of the informatory double.

2—South decides to await developments, despite his two-suiter and lack of defensive strength against spades.

3—Somewhat optimistic, but a sound tactical move to keep obviously strong vulnerable opponents out of the bidding.

4—North has already shown strength. He hopes the opponents will reach four spades, and trusts his partner to re-open if he possibly can, should East pass.

5—South steps into the breach with a fine bid, drawing the proper inferences from the bidding thus far.

6—Somewhat unsound, despite the spade Ace and three trumps to the Jack. East has however already limited his strength by passing West's three-spade bid.

7—A perfect re-double because the opponents, even though non-vulnerable, should be drastically punished if they decide to rescue.

The Play.

West opened a low spade and East won with the Ace and returned a second round of the suit, which South trumped. The bidding had practically marked West with a singleton heart and East with three. Declarer laid down the heart King and then led a diamond which was won by the King in dummy. A low diamond lead to the Jack was taken by West's Ace and a third round of diamonds led. Declarer trumped with dummy's heart Queen, led a heart, finessing the ten, drew the last trump and cashed his two good diamonds. There was no question about who had the Ace of clubs and dummy's King won the tenth trick for North-South.

On The Air Today

The air conditioning at N. B.C. came just in time. Wednesday night Phil Lampkin will audition some 70 candidates for the job of singing on the Pacemakers program on WRC.

Each of the radio editors in town will hear the 70 before the night is over. So—praises be to N. B. C.'s new cooling plant.

Three of the applicants will be selected by the radio editor judges. The radio audience will make the final selection of one of the three. (Maestro Lampkin also hints of an innovation in his program next week.)

After hearing everything in the way of Washington talent that N. B.C. and C. B. S. could trot out, an oil company finally selected WJSV for its new program—but will send a boy-and-girl team down from New York to do the five-night-a-week program.

It goes without saying that both local network offices presented the best talent the town affords and in the most attractive fashion. Yet talent for the program is being sent from New York.

But we'll see the day yet when a local show is produced employing the services of Washington artists and which will stack up as radio entertainment with those originating from New York.

• • • •

"March of Time" returns to the air in August via C. B. S. in five quarter-hour programs a week. This ambitious plan calls for re-enactment of the day's news, Mondays through Fridays . . . Lum and Abner, heard now on the Mutual network, will be presented on N. B. C.'s Blue network early in September.

• • • •

The White Brothers made such a big hit last week with both Art Godfrey and his radio audience that they encore tonight, WJSV, 9:30 . . . Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding the Twenty-ninth Division, National Guard, makes a short talk on the Guard's plans for field training up in Pennsylvania, WMAL, 8:30 p. m. . . . Beauty Box Theater presents "Die Fledermaus," a Strauss operetta, WRC, at 9.

• • • •

This is Stoop and Budd's night again at WJSV, at 8:30 . . . and we're still waiting for something really worthy of the talent displayed in their past efforts . . . One thing can be said in favor of an orchestra—the quality. If the organization is good to begin with, it usually holds up, as witness the superlative entertainment provided by the Warings . . . Pity the poor comedian!

• • • •

"Curbstone Queries" yesterday started as a discussion of plans used by those interviewed in seeking comfort these hot days . . . but took on a sudden and unexpected vibrant tone of oratory in the interests of socialism! . . . Which proves that practically anything will happen in this air questioning of noon-hour passers-by. "Curbstone Queries" will be heard today, WMAL, at 12 noon.

• • • •

Lord and Lady Baden-Powell will be presented in the broadcast from a luncheon in their honor WMAL, 1:30 p. m. . . . and also Walter W. Head, president of the Boy Scouts of America. . . . Ben Bernie plays a typical Bernie ditty, "I Played Fiddle for the Czar" in his round-the-world show, WRC, at 6. . . . Winning organ compositions at the American Guild of Organists convention recently will be presented at 10:30 p. m., WMAL, with William Meeder playing the solos and accompanying the Gothic Choristers. . . . N. T. G. presents the Duncan Sisters, WMAL, at 8.

9 GAME CHICKENS WERE HATCHED ON TOP OF THE REFRIGERATOR IN THE HOME OF G. M. VAN HOESEN, ARLINGTON COUNTY, VA.

Mr. Van Hoesen found a nest in the woods near his home where one of the chickens had laid 13 eggs. He took them in the house in a basket which he placed on top of the electric refrigerator. The next morning he found one of the eggs had hatched. He left them there and in four days nine had hatched. Today eight of the chicks are still living. Mr. Van Hoesen explains that the refrigerator is insulated below the machinery which is at the top of the box; hence the top remains warm—sufficently so, with the heat of the room, to hatch the eggs.

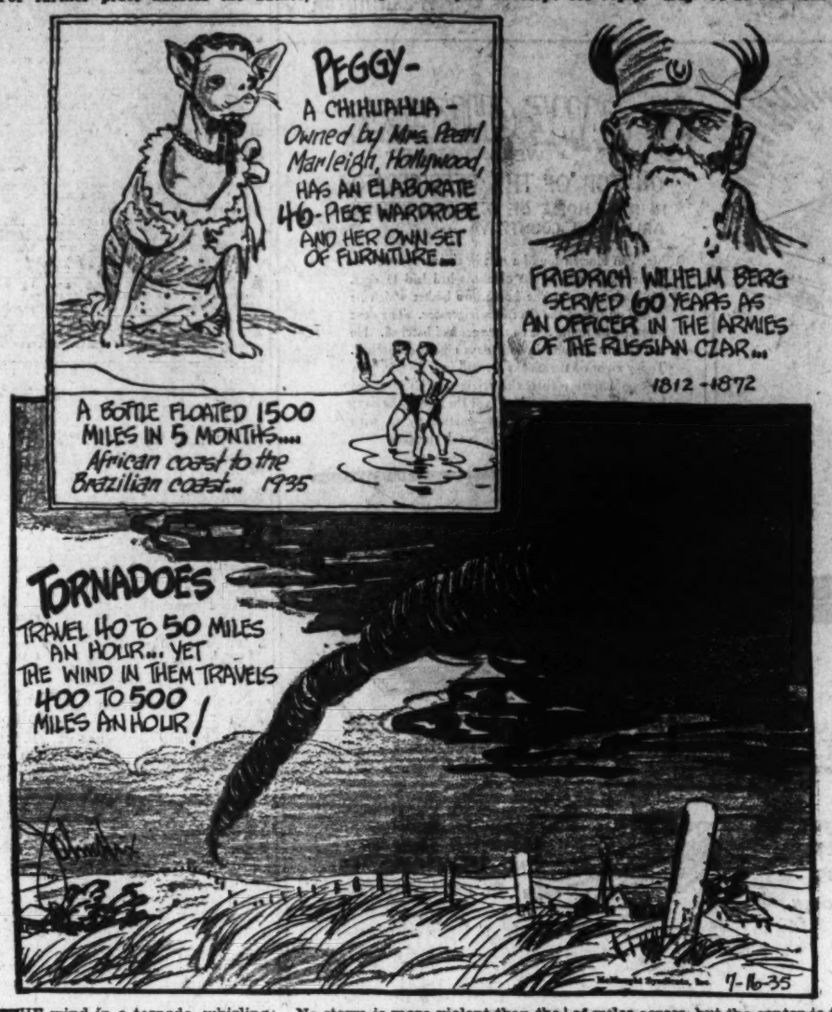
Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.



THE wind in a tornado, whirling along with an almost unbelievable power to destroy, travels at a speed no man-made machine has ever been able to measure. Meteorologists estimate that wind velocity of 400 to 500 miles per hour are common in tornadoes—but instruments will not stand up under the terrific strain. Yet, strange as it seems, the storm itself travels comparatively slowly—about 40 to 50 miles and hour on the average.

No storm is more violent than the tornado. About 100 such storms occur with varying toll of life and property annually in the United States, generally confined to the central Mississippi Valley. Typical tornado weather is hot and humid. Cold air over a lower hot layer sets up an unstable condition in the atmosphere which results in the warm air being displaced. It rises with a rotary motion due to the inrush of cold air from outlying areas. The storm may measure hundreds of miles across, but the center is the destructive element. Here the typical funnel-shaped cloud is formed.

Borne along by ocean currents, a bottle dropped overboard off Benguela on the west coast of Africa in mid-October last year, was picked up 1,500 miles away on the banks of the Jaboatao River, Brazil, on March 22, this year. The bottle had been in the water just a little more than five months, traveling about 10 miles per day.

Officials Probe Couple's Death At Italian Spa

U.S. Woman, British Friend Die Mysteriously at Health Resort.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, July 15.—Italian authorities opened an investigation today of the strange deaths in a bathing resort of an American art teacher and her British escort.

Mrs. May Katherine Thompson, 40, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and H. N. Scott, British subject and director of the American Express Co. in Italy, were found dead yesterday in the sulphur baths at Acque Albule, popular bathing resort near Rome.

An autopsy was ordered by authorities at Tivoli when two glasses containing a red liquor were found near the spot.

Although admitting this might prove to be nothing more than wine, the officials requested an expert from the Rome Legal and Medical Institute to test the liquid.

Earlier, doctors had expressed a theory the couple may have died of asphyxiation from sulphur fumes. Since the deaths took place in the Tivoli Judicial District, authorities there are conducting the investigation.

A doctor at the bathing establishment, as soon as the bodies were found, worked at resuscitation. Later, finding the glasses, he used a stomach pump.

The two went to Acoue Albule with friends to swim in the sulphur waters. Mrs. Thompson, whose husband is Edwin F. Thompson, of Brooklyn, arrived as a tourist a little more than a week ago. She was scheduled to go to Florence last night.

The American consulate was notified of her death.

Tivoli authorities said it was difficult to accept the verdict of death from sulphur fumes because of the position of the bodies. Mrs. Thompson, in a bathing suit, was sitting in a tub through which the water flowed while Scott, also in a bathing suit, sat in a chair at the other end of the cabin.

Officials said it was possible for Mrs. Thompson to have died from fumes because she disregarded a warning posted in the cabin not to enter the tub before the water reached the top, thus releasing all dangerous vapors that might have concentrated in the tub, but they could not see how Scott, some distance from the tub, could have died.

Woman Admits She Saw Kin Strangled

Mother-in-Law Changes Her Story in Chicago Case.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 15.—A new admission by Mrs. Blanche Dunkel that she was present when her son-in-law, Ervin Lang, was strangled, was announced by Lieut. Tom Kelly tonight.

In earlier statements the 43-year-old grandmother had steadfastly denied she was in the apartment of Mrs. Evelyn Smith when the slaying was perpetrated.

After this development, police took Mrs. Dunkel to the swamp near Hammond, Ind., where Lang's legless, garroted body was found last Tuesday in hopes the visit would move her to further disclosures.

But the prisoner, who today affirmed her announcement that she intended to aid the prosecution hunt down the participants in the crime by declining to press a habeas corpus action, was unmoved as she stood in the boggy flats while officers pointed out the scene to her.

At the same time, the hunt for Mrs. Smith, named by Mrs. Dunkel to officers as Lang's actual slayer, and her Chinese husband, Harry Jung, continued. Officers made several new raids in Chinatown and authorities in several nearby States were wired descriptions of the missing pair.

Toll of Irish Riots Now 6 Dead, 70 Hurt

Belfast, July 15 (U.P.).—Nationalists and Orangemen renewed rioting today, breaking a truce enforced by steel-helmeted soldiers patrolling the York and Patrick streets district. A fresh outbreak of sniping in the Millfield district killed one and injured several others. Total casualties mounted to 6 dead and 70 wounded.

Clashes between Catholics and Protestants began Friday during celebration of the 245th anniversary of the Battle of Boyne. Police called out troops who patrolled the danger zones in armored cars, mounted machine guns at strategic points and enforced a 9 p. m. curfew.

Blind Man Hurls Sweetheart To Her Death as 'Act of Mercy'

Boston Beggar-Musician Tells of Fear of Poverty and Quarrel With Girl Before He Threw Her From Hotel Window.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 15.—Forest R. Wells, 30, blind musician, faced a murder charge tonight for what Police Inspector Harry Pierce said Wells described as "an act of mercy"—the hurling of his nearly blind sweetheart to her death from a hotel window.

Her pet dog was thrown after her.

The girl, Hazel Martin, 25, was found writhing in agony beneath the third story window of her cheap hotel room. She died before she could be taken to a hospital.

Pierce said Wells told him he threw the girl from the window as "an act of mercy," to save her from want.

Wells did not explain why he also threw his sweetheart's pet dog from the window, injuring the animal so seriously its life had to be ended.

Wells, tall and angular, and Miss Martin long were familiar figures on Boston sidewalks. He played an accordion none too well, and she sang as she guided him uncertainly about the business district. They were rewarded with small coins. When arrested, as he sat on Miss Martin's bed with his head in his hands, Wells had in his possession $2, all in nickels.

He told police he had waited in his connecting room until he was certain his sweetheart was asleep, but he had never seen her face and he could not know what agony and despair may have been written there as she was plunged to her death.

They had been quarreling and unhappy, Wells told the officers, and he wished to leave her but feared what would become of her because they were "broke."

Wells said he brought Miss Martin from Columbus, Ohio, two years ago. They had registered at the hotel as "R. Wells and Miss H. Wells, Detroit," and represented themselves as brother and sister.

On information furnished by Wells, police at Columbus located a trunk filled with love letters exchanged by the pair.

Justice, symbolically also sightless, took charge of the case promptly and Wells was held without bail, charged with murder, pending action by the grand jury.

Canada Pair's Death Believed Murder, Suicide

Couple Found Dead a Few Hours Before They Were to Wed.

By the Associated Press.

Kitchener, Ontario, July 15.—What authorities said they believed was murder and suicide ended the romance of a young Kitchener couple today a few hours before their wedding.

Clarence Johannes, 24, and his 19-year-old fiancee, Kathleen Alice Britton, were found dead in Johannes' shack on Dundas street with exploded shotgun shells beside each body.

A note found in the man's pocket said both he and his bride-to-be were "broke" and thought "this is the best way—to go out by ourselves." Although the note was signed by both, police said it was in Johannes' handwriting.

Signs of Fight Seen.

Despite the note, police expressed belief there had been a fight between the two. They found a broken iron frying pan with human hair on the bottom which they said matched the girl's hair.

Clarence Fisher, a taxi driver, received a call to take Johannes and the Britton girl from her home to Johannes' house. When he drove them there he was told to wait.

After waiting two hours, Fisher entered the small house and found the girl lying dead in the bedroom. He ran out and called police and they found Johannes' body in the basement.

Johannes had worked in Kitchener for the past ten years and had been going with the Britton girl about a year. Her father is caretaker at the city hall. An inquest into the deaths was set for Thursday.

Were to Wed Yesterday.

Neighbors said the couple had planned to be married at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The note found on Johannes' body read:

"To our friends of Kitchener, Ont. Between Miss Alice Britton, of 340½ King street West, and Mr. Clarence Johannes, of Dundas avenue, was thought the matter over and thought this was the best way out if we go by ourselves in the land of rest. I love her and she loves me. We are both broke and can not make ends meet. So goodby. Please do not cry over us for it will do no good. Love to Mr. and Mrs. William Britton (parents of the girl) and Mr. and Mrs. William Johannes."

2 Men Lynched In Churchyard In Mississippi

Negroes Taken by Mob From Deputy After Arrest for Attack.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Miss., July 15.—Two Negro farmers were lynched today by a mob in the Mississippi Delta, and another was pursued by a posse across the Mississippi River into Arkansas in connection with attacks or attempted attacks on white women.

Bert Moore and Morton Dooley, each about 26, were snatched from Deputy Sheriff Parker Harris on the main highway 4 miles north of Columbus, and were whisked to the Negro Zion Church, eight miles south of the city, and hanged to a big oak tree.

Another Negro, said by Sheriff J. H. Logan, of Tallahachie County, to be Rayfield Sutton, 28, charged with attacking a white farm girl Friday night 4 miles from Charleston, was pursued to the Arkansas State line by more than 100 citizens and officers with bloodhounds. He escaped.

The deputy reported he was unable to resist the mob. They did not molest him. The mob drove the Negroes back through Columbus to the church grounds. Each was made to stand on top of an automobile with his hands tied behind him and a noose fastened around his neck.

The ropes were knotted to the tree limbs and at a signal the cars were driven out and the bodies swung downward.

Attorney Asks Public Counsel For Criminals

Bar Association Hears of Plan to Eliminate Shyster Lawyers.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles July 15.—Elimination of private defense counsel in all criminal cases and substitution of a public defender would "strike at the very root of our crime problem," Mayer C. Goldman, New York, said in an address prepared for delivery before the American Bar Association tonight.

Goldman termed the increasing number of "lawyer-criminals" a national scandal and a menace to the Government itself.

"The increasing number of lawyer-criminals, and the difficulty, delay and expense of convicting guilty or powerful defendants, have become a national scandal," he said.

The New York attorney said the recent conviction of two lawyers in Oklahoma and Illinois, one for accepting part of the $200,000 Urschel kidnaping ransom as a fee, and the other for illegally shielding one of the Dillinger gang, are striking examples of "vicious partnerships between dangerous criminals and crooked lawyers."

"Substitute honest State defenders for crooked private lawyers and the crime wave will diminish," he declared.

Scott M. Loftin, president of the Bar Association, will speak on the same subject tomorrow.

New officers will be elected Friday. William L. Ransom, of New York, delegates agreed, will be the new president, and Boston's invitation for the 1936 convention will be accepted.

Scores of reports have been prepared for submission to the convention. One report on the Hauptmann trial declares "the attorneys for the defendant and the prosecuting attorney, as well, took advantage of the situation and by personal interviews and talks over the radio, seemed to disregard all accepted rules of dignity and court ethics.

Commenting upon the committee report in Trenton, N. J., David T. Wilentz, attorney general who was chief prosecutor at the trial of Hauptmann, said the criticism was "unfair, unwarranted and without basis."

Maryland Convict Ends Life in Cell

Beall, Recaptured After Escape, Hangs Self.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 15.—Norman Beall, 24, a State prisoner, was found dead in his cell at the Maryland Penitentiary today, his body hanging by his necktie and belt from bars at the top of the cell.

Beall escaped from the State penal farm at Roxbury Sunday, was recaptured within a few hours and sent to the penitentiary here. John W. Biederman, 23, who escaped with him, was two cells away.

Beall was interviewed today by Warden Patrick Brady a few hours before he killed himself and gave no reason for his escape from the penal farm. Biederman said he wanted to visit his wife and children. Beall was sentenced in Prince Georges County on October 28, 1933, to three years for larceny and receiving stolen goods. His home was in Hyattsville. Biederman was convicted in Cumberland of larceny and receiving stolen goods and entered prison October 8, 1934.

Cuban Kidnapers Sentenced to Die

4 Who Took $300,000 Ransom Face Execution.

By the Associated Press.

Havana, July 5.—The Cuban government struck a severe blow at kidnaping today when the urgency court sentenced to death four men convicted of the kidnaping of Antonio San Miguel, 78-year-old multimillionaire.

It was the first time in the Republic's history a death sentence had been dealt a kidnaper and they were the first such sentences under the recently enacted "Falla law" against gangsterism.

The Falla law was decreed shortly after Eutimio Falla Bonet, young millionaire, was kidnaped and then freed after payment of $300,000.

Nine other defendants were acquitted. The death sentences, it was understood, will not be carried out until forthcoming elections determine whether capital punishment is to be abolished.

The $300,000 paid by Falla Bonet topped the world record for high ransoms.

The condemned men are Gregorio Martin, Elizardo Salavarria, Ramon Suarez and Jose Diaz Garrido.

10 Killed, 32 Injured In Reich Mine Blast

By the Associated Press.

Dortmund, Germany, July 15.—Fears of a huge loss of life through an explosion and subsequent fire in a coal mine here were removed tonight when a roll call established that all men had been accounted for.

Ten miners were killed and 32 injured when the explosion rocked the mine half a mile under the earth and then set fire to the shaft. It was first believed many of the 700 miners underground had been entombed, but the check-up disclosed they had reached the surface safely.

Sentenced to Romance.

New York, July 15 (U.P.).—When James Calhoun, 25, pleaded guilty to abandoning his wife "at least seven times," County Judge George W. Martin today considered a five-year probationary sentence, saying "Get yourself a job; see your wife once in a while; take her under the trees and look at the moon and try to regain your lost love." "You bet," said Calhoune.

Courtney Ryley Cooper's '10,000 Public Enemies'

Chapter II.—Guns in the Dark.

It was then that Wilbur Underhill, escaped convict, ran out of the brush, upon a jagged, dodging course, and headed for the bluff of a river. There, with the crack of rifles sounding behind him, he leaped into the water, diving at frequent intervals to escape the bullets which were splashing about him. At last he climbed out uninjured on the other side of the river and headed into the scrub oak. Guards sometimes are notoriously bad shots.

A short time later, the desperado reached Wichita, Kans., where he took up his residence in a hotel, to all appearances merely one of the dozens of farmers, oil workers, ranchers and business men who frequented the place. Then a robbery occurred in Wichita and someone in the hotel reported having seen stolen goods in Underhill's room.

By this time, of course, the man was armed. The love of a criminal for guns is almost an obsession. Underhill was a perfect specimen of this sort. Guns were his hobby; he loved them, pored over them, spent long hours in target practice, with a tree as an imaginary man.

Then make-believe became reality. Merle Colver, a Wichita policeman, came to Underhill's room to question him regarding the reported possession of stolen goods. The bandit opened the door with one hand and with the other grasped an automatic pistol. Colver had no time to ask questions. He fell mortally wounded, and other policemen hurrying to his aid caught the murderer as he sought to escape. Since Kansas has no law providing capital punishment, Underhill promptly pleaded guilty to the killing of the policeman, thereby being sent to Lansing prison for life; otherwise he might have been returned to Oklahoma and been executed for the O'Neal murder.

Plunges Into Career Of Robbery, Murder.

So again he was in jail and working to be free. On Memorial Day, 1933, there was a prison break. Underhill "crushed out" with ten other convicts. Now, with some 12 years of crime development behind him, he plunged into a career of bank robbery, assault, holdups, and murder in the three States. At last he became so dangerous that even hardened bank robbers became fearful and excused themselves from teaming up with him. Finally he was identified as a violator of various Federal laws. This put the United States Government on his trail. A determined hunt began.

For a time it seemed in vain. Protected by the wide range of criminal acquaintanceship which he possessed, Underhill was always a jump ahead of the officers. Perhaps it made him even more daring; he entered the town of Coalgate, Okla., one day with Hazel Hudson, a childhood sweetheart and a member of the family from which sprang the Jarrett gang of bank robbers. There he was married. Then with his bride he vanished.

But the net drew slowly tighter. One cold, drizzling night in late December, 1933, word came that the Tri-State Terror, as he now was known, with his wife and some pals, was in a house at Shawnee, Okla.

The information had come at midnight. Two hours later, after a wild 43-mile drive from Oklahoma City, seven special agents and eight police officers and deputy sheriffs crept toward the house, from a point some distance away where they had left their three automobiles. Then a dog began to bark from an adjoining yard.

"Hurry!" came in a low tone from the special agent in charge. "That dog'll warn him—"

Crouched, they ran forward. Then the special agent in charge straightened, his submachine gun in readiness. Before him, not 50 feet away, outlined in the light from a raised window shade, stood Wilbur Underhill.

He was in his underwear, apparently making ready for bed. Within reach, upon a nearby table, the special agent could see two converted Luger pistols, each capable of firing 32 shots with machine-gun speed.

"This is the law!" shouted the special agent. "Put your hands up, Wilbur. And don't reach for those guns!"

The desperado stood perfectly still for almost a second. Then spasmodically he whirled to the right and grasped the two Lugers. Again the agent shouted; the answer of the Terror was to bring the guns into firing position and pull their triggers. Instantly yellow-streaked fire burst forth from half a dozen spots in the darkness. Underhill staggered and fell to the floor.

"We got him!" shouted a deputy.

"Stay back there!" The special agent in command was a veteran of many such battles. Then, "Didn't I tell you? He's on his feet again."

The Terror had risen, both Lugers blazing. Now there were 15 guns to answer his shots. Suddenly aid came to Underhill from the front end of the house. A pal, Ralph Rowe, had seized a weapon and had begun firing.

The night was now a hideous rattle, stabbed by the screams of Underhill's woman. But still the battle continued. The deadly spurts which had been coming from the front window ceased; Rowe had been wounded and was out of the battle. Underhill rose from his hiding place. Then with amazing strength he leaped for the door leading to a hallway.

Guns converged on the front veranda. The door opened. A dim, grayish form showed faintly as Underhill leaped from the house to the steps, then outward. Again the drive of bullets began, automatics, pistols, the deathly rattle or submachine guns. Wilbur Underhill slumped in a stumbling fall, only to straighten and again go onward. Once more the posse cut him down. But once more he rose—and vanished around the side of a neighboring house.

Then the slow search began. The hunt was fruitless. Bloodhounds were hurriedly brought from town. The drizzle had become a downpour now; they circled aimlessly, baying their inability to pick up a scent. Meanwhile Sheriff Stanley Rogers, of Oklahoma City, heard a rumor that a man who staggered had been seen at the rear door of a downtown furniture store. He hurried there with his men. There, sprawled on a bed which had been set up as a furniture exhibit, they found the hunted man, his body torn by 13 bullets; three of them had caused vital wounds. Yet it was nearly a week before the Tri-State Terror died.

The story of Underhill, as I have told it in detail, seems unusual. However, the only modification necessary to make it applicable to any one of the spectacular cases which have occupied public attention within the last few years is to change the names and locale. The formula is the same, whether the place be New York, San Francisco, New Orleans or Chicago. In a measure, the history of Wilbur Underhill is even the history of Al Capone. Certainly there could be no two men apparently more widely separated in the field of crime. But let us compare them:

Underhill started as a small-time bootlegger. Capone started as a hanger-on around the Five Points in New York. Underhill widened his acquaintanceship among criminals. Capone finally became known among gangsters in New York as a tough man in a fight and was taken to Chicago as a hoodlum. Both Underhill and Capone grew into enemies of society through a slow climb of the ladder; this writer can remember the days when Al Capone was only a "capper," procurer and manager for the Four Deuces saloon and brothel at No. 2222 South Wabash avenue, in Chicago. I saw him there a dozen times, coat collar turned up on winter nights, hands deep in pockets as he fell in step with a passer-by and mumbled:

"Say, Pal, want to drink some good beer? Got some nice-looking girls inside here——"

Both Capone and Underhill were at one time merely members of the 3,000,000 small timers from which graduate the Ten Thousand.

* * * *

A long-established tradition demands that one speak kindly of the dead; nevertheless, it becomes necessary to lay one more wreath of thistles upon the unrevered grave of prohibition. The present crime set-up with its vast underground tendrils of acquaintanship, "connections," persons "wired in" to courts and police departments, is directly traceable to this experiment. Before that, the worst that could be said of any community was that it was a "good town," which meant in thieves' slang that it was an abiding place of crooks.

Kansas City Reporting Days Are Recalled.

Kansas City, in my younger days as a police reporter, was such a town. Often in the grimy old police headquarters down at Fourth and Main streets, I would glance up from my typewriter to wave a greeting to some nationally known pickpocket as he came slowly up the iron stairway from the street, worn slick by the passage of the criminals of the city.

Perhaps it would be Pinky Blitz, whose front view and profile glared from the Rogues Galleries of a half hundred cities; or Milwaukee Whitey, or Memphis Thin; sooner or later they all made their way up those worn iron stairs and went in to report to the chief of police.

This was a truce with crime. Pinky Blitz, when he needed money, would take a tour away from Kansas City. He would pick pockets where he chose, and when he became afraid of the law, he would return and make the trip up the iron stairway, to inform the police that he was back home and happy. The police then would go through the formula of telling Pinky Blitz that they expected him to obey the laws while he was in town, and in the event of a complaint from another city, naming him as a participant in some pocket-picking bee, he must live up to the rules of the game by coming down to headquarters and giving himself up to the visiting officers. All this was done; it was a matter of honor. This was the routine of the average good town.

There are no really good towns any more, as viewed by the old standards. Prohibition made most cities good towns, but upon a different basis. Where formerly a crook might remain in a city as long as he committed no crime, he now may reside in the town, and even be a captain of a gang which preys upon that city, if he is properly "wired in." Dutch Schultz, of New York remained free while the 20,000 police of New York "sought him," a condition which Inspector Valentine, of that city declared impossible without tremendous political influence.

Purvis to Write Magazine Series

By the United Press.

Chicago, July 15.—Melvin H. Purvis, nemesis of Dillengers and Pretty Boy Floyds, who resigned Friday from the Department of Justice, announced tonight he was going into seclusion to prepare a series of magazine articles on his exploits.

"I am not a criminologist nor a sociologist," he said. "The theoretical side of crime I don't know much about. But what little I have found out about the practical basis of tracing a crook and putting him either in the clouds or behind the bars will be told in this series.

"Somewhere along the line an idea may shine through and lead to a better understanding of crime prevention."
